Superior spirit

Inside these thick concrete walls and through these heavy classroom doors lies something that sets us apart. Of course, like any other school, we are all simply students soaking up all the details of World War II or straining ourselves to understand the steps to synthetic division. But here lies that something that makes us different, that something that defines us as a whole, that something that unifies us as a school. Each Friday, mobs of students, faculty and staff dressed in purple flood the hallways, Pirate faces line everything from tee-shirts to sweatshirts and spirit permeates the air. Each game day, jerseys fill seats in classrooms, purple hair ribbons glitter in the light and posters made with determination and pride decorate the walls. At MHS, we have something completely unique in the pride we have for our school, our classmates and ourselves. Through our pride, our confidence and our unity, we make purple reign.

More than any other time, high school years offer unique experiences. Teens change every day, they enjoy different things, sometimes all at the same time.

In this school diversity reigns and new friends come together every day. Every person is different, each with a unique personality. These personalities will either clash or blend.

Friends remember the journeys of most embarrassing moments: being teased about driving mom's car, or managing to keep a healthy figure for the new clothing trends.

These pages take a dive back to the pertinent parts of high school, these lasting stories recorded for all to remember.

The excitement at the homecoming parade helps Seniors Nicole Vowell, Jessica Francis and Holly Floyd get into character for the senior float. The float's theme was "Good guys vs. bad guys" and many seniors participated. Francis said, "I enjoyed being with my friends and getting a little crazy."

"I play sports so I've always worked out, but I really enjoy it, it relieves a lot of stress," says Senior Michael Trajkovski. Achieving and obtaining a good body was a big aspect of high school life during the year.

Adding a personal touch to a cell phone was a big hit this year amongst students. Applying jewels to a cell phone was a simple way for personal style to be reflected in different ways.

Have you ever been told you look like Usher?

"Yes, a lot of times."

Does it happen often?

"Ever since sixth grade to senior year."

Do you think you look like him?

"A little bit."

Does it bother you that people think you resemble him?

"Doesn't bother me at all."

Ms. Amy Govert

Have you ever been told you look like Amber from Survivor?

"Yes, all the time by my softball girls."

Does it happen often?

"When I am paying attention, all the time."

Do you think you look like her?

"I have never seen her before."

Does it bother you that people think you resemble her?

"I don't know yet since I don't know what she looks like yet."

Mr. James Stamper

Have you ever been told you look like Jimmy Stewart?

"Yes, every time we watch one of his movies in class. They say I act like him too."

Does it happen often?

"When I'm wearing a suit, shopping for shoes, in an old folks' home. They call me a young whippersnapper."

Do you think you look like him?

"I could only hope, he is very handsome."

Does it bother you that people think you resemble him?

"No, he's a great American actor. He taught me how to live."

Have you ever been told you look like Ron Stoppable?

"No, not really."

Does it happen often?

"It really doesn't really happen a lot, occasionally people will tell me."

Do you think you look like him?

"I sort of see a resemblance."

Does it bother you that people think you resemble him?

"No, I don't really care."

Do you think you look like Jennifer Cieslak?

"We have similarities."

Have you ever been told you look like Jen? If so, by who?

"By so many people I can't even count."

How many times are you mistaken for her?

"A lot!"

Are you bothered by having people mistake you for her?

"It gets annoying sometimes."

Despina Lozevski

Do you think you look like Stephanie Pavlish?

"Some what. We have some of the same qualities."

Have you ever been told you look like Stephanie Pavlish?

If so, by who?

"All the time, by everybody: classmates, students and Mr. Klimczak."

How many times are you mistaken for her?

"A few times, not a lot."

Are you bothered by having people mistake you for her?

"It does not bother me, there is no point being insulted."

Kiara Hagan

Do you think you look like Brianna Carter?

"Yes, because everybody has been saying that since the seventh grade."

Have you ever been told you look like Brianna Carter? If so, by who?

"Yes, by students."

How many times are you mistaken for her?

"A whole bunch of times."

Are you bothered by having people mistake you for her?

"No, because she is a very pretty girl."

Did that just happen?

"When I was in the seventh grade at Pierce Middle School, I was sitting with my friends on the gym bleachers waiting for my bus to get called. I heard my bus number get announced and I got up suddenly and ran down the bleachers. I was running so fast that I ended up tripping, falling and rolling down the bleachers. I did this in front of everyone in the gym."
— Freshman Alexander Salinas

"I used to play soccer, and one day during my freshman year, we were practicing penalty kicks and my turn came up to kick the ball. When I went to run and kick the ball, my foot missed the ball, and I slipped and fell flat on my back in front of the whole soccer team." — Junior Caitlin DeCourcy

"Sophomore year me and my friends made shirts for the big Crown Point football game, and we cut ties in the side. That morning I was late to school and had to run to my locker. Without even thinking I slammed my locker shut, turned to run to class. The next thing I hear is 'ripl' My ties got caught in my locker and the whole side of my shirt ripped. The kids next to my locker were cracking up and I had to run to chemistry class holding my shirt together." — Senior Dana Sylva

"Last Winter Guard season we were at a contest in Lake Central. My instructor told us to help out with the other guard's props so we went to help out with the tarp. Then we watched the show and everything went fine. At the end of the show we only had a few minutes to get everything off and a few of us started to pull the tarp in. Not thinking, I tried to jump over the tarp to get over to the other side while the other girls are folding the rest out of the way. I ended up tripping and falling hard onto the gym floor in front of a huge crowd. Plus, my parents had a video camera with them and got everything on tape." — Junior Megan Fisch

"I was at my boyfriend's house, looking out of his glass door and suddenly I saw a deer, so I shouted, 'Hey there's a deer in your backyard!' My boyfriend comes running down the stairs along with his dad. We all looked outside, and I realized that the 'deer' was really a bush with a rabbit sitting behind it. I thought the bush was the body and the rabbit was the head." — Senior Magen Fassoth

As a genuphobic (a person who fears knees), Sophomore Kathrine Harold becomes frightened by Sophomore Debra Harstead's knee. Ever since Harold saw a girl's knee become dislocated in sixth grade, she has never looked at knees the same way. "It was up in her thigh, and it was just disgusting," Harold said that even when she is shaving her legs, she has to look away from her knees.

At the sight of stickers, Junior Dwayne Johnson makes a face to reflect his feelings about stickers. For as long as Johnson can remember, stickers have always bothered him. Whether he sees stickers or someone is peeling stickers off of him, stickers disgust Johnson. "If someone is peeling a brand name sticker off a bottle, I run away. I really don't like stickers." His worst encounter with stickers had been when one of his friends placed stickers all over his face when he was asleep, and he had to peel them off.

Glancing at the mustard on the plate, Senior Jaqueline Smith attempts to ignore the smell and sight of the mustard. For as long as she can remember, she has always hated mustard. "It just looks and smells weird," Smith said. As an employee of McDonald's, she deals with mustard every time she is at work. Fellow co-worker Senior Dana Sylva, said, "She won't even bag food if it has mustard in it. If someone is eating something with mustard on it, she will sit at the end of the table."

Surrounded by enclosed space, Senior Courtney Miller shows a nervous expression. Miller has a fear known as claustrophobia. "I just feel like I'm suffocating, or I'm going to get crushed. It became worse the summer before sixth grade. I went on a water slide for the first time, one of the enclosed ones, and I just remember having a panic attack in the slide. I guess I was worried I would get stuck. I thought they would just keep sending people down and I thought I would be totally trapped," Miller said. When Miller had an MRI a couple of years ago, she had to make a special arrangement for an open MRI.

Are you afraid of the dark?

Hobbies & Hangouts

Before school, after school, on weekends. Where do students go to take time out of school and spend time with friends? Where are these local hangouts where so many students are regulars? What foods tickle students' taste buds? Is there any local entertainment that soothes a student's ear? What sights, sounds or even smells allow students to relax and forget about school for a little while? What activities allow students to be alone in a moment without the stresses of school overwhelming their minds? What activities allow students to get together for a night of fun?

Ready for takeoff, Junior Gerald Taylor sits in the cockpit of a Piper Warrior. Gerald has been flying small airplanes for a little over a year. "I like flying. It is such a cool feeling when I am able to get away from everything and just have fun. Plus the girls seem to like it when I tell them what I do in my spare time," said Taylor.

Posing with Yosemite Sam, Seniors Lindsey Trock, former Merrillville student Lauren Rees, Nicole Vowell, Megan Lee and Heather Zurek spend a day at Six Flags. "It was a fun day to celebrate the end of the school year," said Trock.

As they pose behind a cow with White Sox spirit, Seniors Abigail Deidigha, Nicole Langford and Aziah Parker enjoy Chicago after a White Sox game. "We were just hanging out going around; just walking around Chicago," Deidigha said. Deidigha also said that she and her friends take the time to tour Chicago together once every couple of months.

As they try on hunting boots at Meijer, Seniors Ashley Thomas, Lauren Huish and Alysse Fultz laugh while hanging on to one another for support. For many kids, Meijer is a great place to walk around and "goof off" for a night. "Whenever we have nothing to do, we can always count on Meijer to entertain us with their sweet hunting boots," said Huish.

Sophomore Joshua Crayne and his partner, Haylie Brewster, set their bodies into the fish pose. "I like what I do; ballet helps me in cheerleading and is really fun. Kristy Polster got me hooked last year when she asked me for help in a show," said Crayne.

In high heels and a red ensemble, Sophomore Chae Torres poses with her ballroom dancing instructor Quentin MacAdam. Torres has been dancing for five years. "I want to become a professional because I love to dance," said Torres. Torres goes to Chicago once a week to prepare for her four shows a year.

As he recalls the day he received his car almost three years ago, Senior Beaudilio McClendon tells about his 2004 Mitsubishi Endeavor XLS. McClendon said, "Even though my car is a family car, my ride is different because it has a young look. My car has an in-dash touch screen, custom exhaust, five percent tint, a neon underbody kit, and all of this is sitting on 20 inch 'dubs.'"

D-MAC

To top off his decked out ride, Senior Deji Macarthy has his rims to show. "Most people don't have 22s," said Macarthy. Even though Macarthy has 20 percent tint windows, TVs, a DVD player and a deluxe speaker system, his rims are what he said "I am most proud of." Macarthy also said, "I love my rims because they are 22 inches strong!"

rides

While he disregards all other accessories that he added on his ride, Senior Rayshon Richardson aims toward making his speakers louder than anyone else's speakers. In his '97 Chevy Tahoe 15000, Richardson said, "I have the dual exhaust system, the chromed out grill in the front, halogen lights and 20 inch spinners and 'the bang.' People don't say much when they see my car, but when they hear it, they say, 'It's too loud!'"

After having his decked out ride for two and a half years, Junior Xavier Wilson tells why he thinks his ride is so special. Wilson said that he only washed his car once or twice a month most of the year, but when it came down to decking out the interior of his 2002 Dodge Intrepid, Wilson said, "My car is special because like no one else that I've seen, I have authentic stitched head rests in my car. Everyone else's 'so called' stitching that I have seen were fake. I also got 20 inch rims and a speaker system in the back."

Walking through the halls, a student at Merrillville High School can clearly see girls wearing gauchos, the new craze. "They are like trendy sweatpants," said Alison Conquest.

Sparkled shoes, also known as "flats," are at an all time high right now. They came in all sorts of colors and styles. "I have five pairs! They match with everything," said Senior Kamai Westbrook.

The hobo sequined purse is a new hit with the girls. The purses were sold in almost every girl trend store. "With so many different styles, picking is just too hard," said Senior Cambria Hollingsworth.

MySpace takes over

What is so different about cell phones this year? Girls put gems on the cell phones for a hint of individuality and pizzazz.

A new trend on the rise is having an online diary. MySpace, one of many, is where people post their favorite pictures, music and personal comments. Then others visit the page and post comments as well.

The new trend for music is the iPod. Many different iPods have come out in all shapes, sizes and colors.

"The bigger, the better," said Senior Brandon Jordan, who remarked about the new fashion statement of huge earrings for guys. "I have two pairs, squares and circles."

Girls are not the only ones with fashionable shoes. The huge hit for guys this past year was Nike Shox. They came out in several colors and styles.

LIVESTRONG wristbands were a huge hit this year. After these were introduced by Lance Armstrong in 2004, many other charities adopted the style, but changed the color. Students wore several at a time to accessorize their clothing.

The PSP is the new electronic sensation that not only plays video games, but also movies and music, and it has Internet access. Senior Paulo Lara said, "Who needs friends when you have a PSP?"

Supporting the White Sox, Senior Phillip Keene shows off his White Sox jersey. The Chicago team won the 2005 World Series, and their logos were everywhere.

"Laguna Beach," "The Real World" and "The O.C." What do they all have in common? They are all television shows that were huge hits with teens this past year.

Favorite shows of 150 students

Smiling to a close friend, Senior Tara Florida dips her fork into her bowl of low-fat cottage cheese. Florida said she relied on a diet consisting of high dairy intake to keep her in shape. Florida said, "I choose food awareness over exercise. I have not worked out in the past two years."

In an effort to maintain a healthy lifestyle, many students chose healthy snacks, like a Kashi bar, over fatty foods. A Kashi bar contains a high amount of dietary fiber and protein to promote a healthy heart.

Have you ever ...?

Health & Fitness Poll

What do you do to stay fit?

While spending time with friends at lunch, Alyse Fultz, a senior, remains weight conscious by enjoying a mixed salad along with a diet ice tea. Recently, many students have made the change from fatty foods to healthy substitutes. Fultz chose a salad over pizza because she "hates greasy food," and it makes her feel gross.

In addition to healthy eating and frequent exercise, many people use diet pills as their own personal way of fighting the weight gain. The diet pill had hit the United States for the second time in 1973. The use of diet pills has continuously grown since the addition of caffeine and other stimulants to the widely used drugs.

Health & fitness become a priority

Weight. Many students are trying to achieve or maintain the perfect weight because of sports or just because they want to stay healthy and feel good about themselves.

Despite all of the fad diets and workout plans out there, staying fit and healthy primarily involves eating correctly and staying active.

Anyone can eat healthy. Eating healthy does not mean someone has to be part of a diet plan.

"I don't think diets are a good idea. Too many girls say they are on diets, and rather than watching what they eat, they end up not eating at all," Junior Jennifer Dietrich said.

When eating healthy, students do not necessarily have to eat less; they just have to watch what they eat. The food pyramid is a diagram that shows the basic foods that students can put into their bodies.

In addition to guidelines given by the food pyramid, students can limit the intake of food that can be harmful to their body.

"I don't drink pop because I know how bad it is for you," Dietrich said.

Merrillville High School tries to promote healthy eating by not serving pop, having a salad bar line and baking their French Fries.

Along with eating healthy, students can also exercise, whether it is for sports or for staying fit.

Junior Richard Reddick is frequently seen in the weight room because it helps him stay in shape during the off-season.

"I probably wouldn't work out as much if I wasn't in sports, but I would still exercise. I really enjoy working out. It just makes me feel better," Reddick said.

Ms. Doris Brown, who has checked students into the weight room for the last twelve years, has noticed that "most of the kids that go in and out of the workout room are in sports." She believes that working out not only helps students physically but can also help to build a student's self-confidence.

"I just wish that more students who aren't in sports would take advantage of the facilities here at Merrillville," Ms. Brown said.

Students do not have to participate in a sport in order to stay in shape.

"I'm not in sports, but that doesn't mean I don't worry about my appearance. I run at home so I can stay in shape," Dietrich said.

MHS not only provides a workout room available to every student, but it also offers classes such as advanced fitness. This class gives those students who cannot workout after school, the opportunity to work out during the day.

Whether students workout or eat healthy, Ms. Brown believes that "students should work towards feeling satisfied with their appearance and gain self-confidence."

"I take pride in my body," Reddick said.

Weightlifting

In the school's weight room, Senior Michael Trajkovski grunts in exhaustion to put up 95 pounds in a power clean. Trajkovski said, "I keep in shape by regular workouts three times a week." Weightlifting took the school by storm, and students everywhere relied on this to keep physically active.

Leg press

Because the leg press strengthens all parts of the lower body, it is one of the most commonly used. Many athletes consisting of runners, football players and softball girls used this machine during their regular workouts. Senior softball player Ashley Traina said, "I always use the leg press because it really helps keep my lower body in shape for the games."

Squats

In an effort to keep in shape and build muscle, Harold Sallee, a junior, squats a total of 115 pounds. In addition to alternate workout days, Sallee participated in the Advanced PE class. "Harold is one of the strongest and most dedicated students in class," Coach Lori Dust said.

Dumbbells

Dumbbells are commonly used to work the upper body by most athletes. The arms, the back and the abdominal muscles all benefit from dumbbell use. "I use the dumbbells a few times a week to strengthen my abs. It's the only type of exercise that works for me," said Junior Jennifer Dietrich.

Arms

While working on his arms, Junior Christopher Burke struggles to push down 80 pounds. Burke worked out in the weight room at least four times a week in an attempt to prepare for his upcoming seasons in tennis and swimming. Burke said, "I don't work out only to keep in physical shape, but it also makes me feel very relaxed when I am finished."

While snowboarding down the hill, Senior Micheal Padgett tries to "manual" (riding on the back of the board). Padgett has been snowboarding for the last 11 years, but started off skiing. He switched to snowboarding because he liked the difficulty. "I like the snow and I like the feeling you get when you board through fresh powder," said Padgett.

Skating at the local skate park, Senior Dwight Harding grinds down a rail. "I like the fact that I can inline anywhere. I can pull out my blades and skate whenever I want," said Harding. He continues the sport because of the freedom he has.

Displaying his skateboarding skills, Junior Jeffrey Nemcek does a 360-heellip. Nemcek said that he has been skateboarding for many years and has been injured many times. "I have broken my fingers and my wrists a few times, but I still skate because it is so fun," said Nemcek.

AdRENALine

rUSH

Outside his house, Senior Gilberto Fuentes does a kick flip on his skateboard. Fuentes said that he started skating because his friends persuaded him to try the sport. "I used to just skate to pass the time, but now I'm a lot better and I have a lot of fun doing it," said Fuentes.

Driving down high school road, valuable lessons are learned through the passage.

Academic classes take up the majority of a student's life, and the habits students use to succeed are unique to each student.

Required classes create a common thread among students, and the elective classes give students an opportunity to learn material for a future career.

Various learning techniques help students excel in their areas of study. Students participate in different academic clubs to further their education in a field of interest. A wide variety of programs are offered to those who are interested in a material.

The diversity of students offers a unique learning experience to teachers and students alike.

"I overcame my fear of public speaking," stated Senior Cheng-Wei Chiang. Highlighting material at an Academic Decathlon practice, Chiang reviews for his next competition. Chiang has been a member of the team since his sophomore year and said he participates because it helps him with his studies. Members agree that learning new material attracts students to participate in Academic Decathlon.

Bowling with Key Club member Senior Lawren Perry, AKtion member Jordan Davisson participates in the Harvest Party sponsored by the Key Club and STAND. The AKtion program is one of the clubs offered to the special education students. Occasionally, other clubs join in events with the AKtion club to promote unity throughout the school.

"Decorating cakes during class is probably the best part," said Junior Sara Furman. Mrs. Carol Von Behren's cake decorating class makes different baked goods. Not only did the students try new recipes, but they also were able to eat their creations. Most of the students agreed eating their creations is one of the best aspects of this elective class.

Brains in competition

Placing second at state was the 'greatest feeling. (It is) the best we've done in eight years doing this.'

Mr. Scott Staley

Discussing topics studied, members of Academic Decathlon enjoy snacks to keep motivated. "The snacks are not the only reason why I joined Academic Decathlon. My sister was in it, and I had Mr. Staley and Mr. Lamberse who asked me to be involved," said Senior Cheng-Wei Chiang.

Promptly, Senior Athena Frost answers a question during a practice session. The Academic Decathlon Team practiced two times a week and competed three times. "I enjoy being in Academic Decathlon because I am around smart people who I can learn from," said Senior William Crosby.

Taking a little time off, Coaches Mr. Robert Bedwell and Mr. Ian Rauseri enjoy their lunches. Mr. Bedwell was the social studies coach and Mr. Rauseri was science coach. "Our coaches helped us a lot. They gave us the information on books and websites that our categories involved," said captain of the interdisciplinary team, Senior Charles Cole.

Not only do sports have regional and state competitions, but so do the Academic Decathlon, Academic Super Bowl, Quiz Bowl and Spell Bowl teams.

Academic Decathlon, coached by Mr. John Lamberie and Mr. Scott Staley, consists of tests in ten disciplines that the team studies before regional competition: math, English, art, music, economics, science, social studies, essay, speech and interview. Nine students participate in three divisions based on grade point average: honors, scholastic and varsity.

At the state competition, Senior Charles Cole won eight gold medals, placing first overall in the honors division, and Senior Athena Frost received six silver medals, placing second overall in the scholastic competition.

Placing second at state was the "greatest feeling. (It is) the best we've done in eight years doing this," said Mr. Staley.

"Everybody on the team is helpful, including the coaches," Senior William Crosby said. "They take time out to help."

Academic Super Bowl, coached by Mrs. Evelyn Steiner, tests students in English, math, social studies, fine arts, science and an interdisciplinary field. The team receives 25 questions, and the students are able to talk with each other to come to an answer.

"We had two firsts, two seconds, and two thirds at area (competition)," Mrs. Steiner said. "We tied for third in state with Portage and Harrison in Lafayette."

Although Academic Decathlon and Super Bowl allow studying beforehand, members of Quiz Bowl go with the flow.

Quiz Bowl competitions are "Jeopardy style with random, intellectual questions," said Mr. Lamberie, one of Quiz Bowl's coaches.

Senior Cheng-Wei Chiang said he joined because "it seemed fun, and I like Jeopardy."

With a 5-4 record, Mr. Staley, Quiz Bowl coach, said, "To finish above 500 is a good thing. To have that record and finish strong in the tournament is always a good sign."

Chiang said the hardest part of the club is "taking the losses. It's only good when you know you've lost to a better team."

Chiang said he has enjoyed "meeting new people, getting quizzed on random knowledge and winning."

Spell Bowl members, coached by Mrs. Steiner, receive a list of approximately 3500 words to study for an area competition. How the team does in area determines whether they advance to state competition.

"We didn't make state, but we weren't that far away. We placed third. The team worked hard this year," said Mrs. Steiner.

A couple of examples of the words studied in Spell Bowl are "consanguineous" and "lagniappe."

Senior Angelica Nunn, a participant of Spell Bowl, said she joined the team because she "wanted to do something academic."

Nunn said, "Mrs. Steiner is a great person to do that (Spell Bowl) because she has a lot of patience."

Preparing for the competition, Junior Benjamin Pankiewicz and Seniors Charles Cole and Athena Frost study their materials. "Competitions are nerve-racking because you are under so much pressure," said Frost.

Looking over notes, Senior Elliott Johnson and Junior Hope Asya-Broughton gain as much information as possible before the test. "The most fun part of being in Super Bowl is the fact that I get to learn and get such a rush from doing competitions," said Johnson.

Sweating it out

Despite the misconceptions, the Physical Education Department, better known as PE, not only provided activity and swimming classes, it also gave students the opportunity to explore in areas beyond.

As freshmen, students were required to take Swimming and Activities to better their knowledge of an active lifestyle. While most students stopped here, they had the chance to excel in other areas offered by the department.

"Having classes outside of the mandatory ones gives the students a chance to be active and become more physically fit," said trainer and PE teacher Mr. Sean Hudson.

The PE Department offered classes such as Bodyworks, Advanced Fitness, and Life Guarding outside of the required classes. Because these were only offered for a semester, students had the ability to take more than one during the school year.

In Bodyworks and Advanced Fitness classes, students stayed in shape by lifting weights and working out throughout the class period.

"Taking Advanced Fitness helped me stay in shape as well as get stronger," said Senior Mike Trajkovski.

The only prerequisite for these classes was a passing grade in one semester of activities and one semester of swimming. Those students taking the life guarding class learned CPR as well as other life saving techniques to apply to the real world. Passing a standard swim test at the beginning of the semester was the only requirement for this class. Once the students passed lifeguarding, they received their CPR card as proof of their knowledge.

The PE Department has had an, "overall success with a decent amount of kids enrolling in the elective classes," said Hudson.

Because of this good turn out, Athletic Training, which has once been offered in previous years to the students, has been discussed to return under the PE department.

Completing her ten reps on the incline press machine, Freshman Danielle Bly is impressed by her performance in her P.E. class. "I feel like I put a lot of effort into the class and I try hard," said Bly. Bly hopes that the class will get her in better shape. She said that she would take the class even if it was not recommended for graduation. Her goal is to get an A out of the class.

Preparing himself for what he thinks is one of the easiest machines in the weight room, Sophomore Carlo Martinez hopes to build muscle and improve his performance in wrestling. "Advanced Fitness is one of my favorite classes. I can already tell that this is the class that I will be looking forward to every day," said Martinez.

Completing a round of push-ups, Junior Ryan Wengel looks up to see if his teacher, Ms. Lori Dust, has called time. "Students in the class usually concentrate on their workout, but in the locker room or on free time, they're pretty cool," said Wengel. The Advanced Fitness class is offered every year. Wengel recommended taking Advanced Fitness for a good workout.

Setting his weight for his turn at the bench press, senior Mike Trajkovski is in the Advance Fitness class at Merrillville. His teacher Ms. Lori Dust said that he takes more interest in the class. She said that he takes to the class well and tries his hardest to do what his best. Even though Trajkovski enjoys the class, he knows that it is going to be a challenge.

From Personal Finance to HTML classes, the variety offered in the Business Department interests students and prepares them for the competitive world of business. The department offers programming classes such as Visual Basic, Internet, Web Page Design and Java Script. Business classes include Business Foundations, Marketing, Business Law, Accounting, International Business and Entrepreneurship.

Business Department Chairman Mr. David Zimmerman said all the computer classes offer a way to gain knowledge of work situations. In four classes, students can earn college credits. Students have to earn a B or a higher grade to qualify for dual credit with Ivy Tech.

"The things we learn in the Business Department are really going to help us later in life because computers are a major part of our lives. We use computers for everything right now," said Senior Jazmine Magee.

Zimmerman also said more students enroll in HTML than any other business class. "Most students prefer the HTML, which is a new program that involves designing of web pages because kids are very interested in designing their own web page," Mr. Zimmerman said.

The HTML web design class helps student create web pages by adding their own color, images and style. "I'm glad I took this class because later in life, if I go into business, I won't have to pay money to make a web page. I can make my own page and design it myself," Senior Mallory Cuevas said.

"I never thought that there could be so much code in making a website, but it was fun," Cuevas added.

The number of students in the department increases from year to year. Mr. Zimmerman said, "We plan to offer a vast array of interesting classes so students can be better aware of the working world."

Preparing students for the business world

Copying codes for her website, Sophomore Chelsea Fejes, really enjoys her HTML class. Fejes favorite part of class is choosing backgrounds and designing her page. "We make web pages and have fun while doing it," said Fejes. Fejes said that she is graded on creativity and how the web page comes together. She recommended that HTML be required for all students to take because the class is fun.

Sophomore Alyssa Cast tries to finish her Finance assignment on time. Cast enjoys the class and finds it interesting. "I knew the background of the class, and Ms. Duzan teaches it very well so that it's understandable," said Cast.

Getting help from his classmates, Senior Alfredo Arredondo hopes he can understand the information. His classmates Bo Patten and Cortez Arnold like the Marketing class and said that it is an easy course. Arnold said the class is a good environment and it's interesting. "To me this class could definitely help me out in the future with my bills and other things," said Arnold.

As Junior Brett Beatty turns around, he checks with Mr. Andrew Niksich to see if his assignment is done correctly. Beatty thinks that the class is fun, but challenging. "The only thing that I hope will happen in Advanced Visual Basics is for me to understand the programming skills better and get a good grade," said Beatty.

5-4-3-2-1 BLAST OFF!!!

In the lab, Senior Jerry Ortiz spray paints the nose of the rocket. Science Club members spent three months building the rocket this year. "We had a model from last year, so it did not take that long. We had to set the standard and come up with a design that was basically flawless," said Senior Lucas Phillips, who has been in Science Club since freshman year.

From life science to physical science to earth science, some students are eager and willing to spend extra time expanding their knowledge of the world of science. Two clubs that focus on science are the Science Club and Science Olympiad.

The Science Club, supervised by Science Department Chairman John D. Oscombe, is an interactive club that allows members to learn about science through hands-on experiments and projects. Members of the Science Club focus on their main activity of designing and building a rocket.

Senior Lucas Phillips said that the goal for this year's rocket project was to "set a standard for a good launch and come up with a flawless design."

To ensure a successful launch in the spring, the students had to quickly transition to design, build and perfect the engineering details in order to earn a qualifying score. Members such as Phillips, Senior Edward Jones and Senior Gerardo Ortiz, Jr. competed in the launch contest this season.

Science teacher Ian Rausei coached the members of Science Olympiad in various areas of science in order to prepare them for competitions. These competitions include 25 events including written examinations, labs and building events in areas of science such as astronomy, ecology and physics.

This season two senior members, Athena Frost and Elliott Johnson, earned three third place medals for the team during a February competition.

Members of the team study together and familiarize themselves with various materials, but overall, Johnson said that they "all have a love for science."

Academics 28 As a small puddle of drool gathers under the chin of Junior Nome Damjanoski, sleeps next to his book. Sleeping in class is not uncommon for him, but he did have to put some effort toward maintaining his GPA. "I just review in class and the night before tests and still get good grades," said Damjanoski.

Staring intently at the small computer screen of his PSP, Senior Paulo Lara keeps one ear open as the teacher lectures. "I don't really study, except right before tests in class," said Lara. He said he is alert in class only when he is playing his PSP; otherwise he enjoys sleeping.

Taking notes as the teacher lectures in class, Sophomore Sonya Lazoski pays attention yet keeps herself busy during the down time of class. "I like to draw a lot in class. It keeps me busy," said Lazoski. She studied for a couple of hours, especially just before tests.

With a book open and her head resting on her fist, Junior Jacqueline Miller reads over the chapter and occasionally slips into a daydream. Being one of the class valedictorians, she did spend sometime studying for each class. "I like to daydream a lot in class if its not right before a test," said Miller.

Every class had them. The students who would sit up front and pay attention in class, follow every instruction, complete all of their homework and earn good grades. At the other extreme are some who seemed to do nothing in class, talk all hour and rarely finish their homework. Most students fall somewhere in between, doing the work and managing to get the grade. Regardless of where they fall in the spectrum of study habits, each student has his or her own method of learning and studying in and out of class.

For some students, study habits must fit in with a vareity of other factors. As for Senior Daniel Enghofer, he said that he finds it difficult to be in honors classes, play sports and maintain his part time job.

Enghofer said, "I barely study outside of school. I only study when I have a huge test, and even then it's at the last possible moment. It's hard fitting everything in a day."

Some people, like Sophomore Kristen Joi Hoyles, choose to study for hours every night.

"I study three to five hours a night, even if I don't have homework or a test," said Hoyles.

Another factor that influences a student's study habits is parental influence. In Hoyles' case, she said that she studies for hours because her parents encourage doing well in school.

Junior Ashish Arshanapalli said, "My parents have enforced good grades all of my life. Doing well in school is very important to them."

Some students find that the pressure to succeed is not only demanded by parents, but also expected by teachers and sometimes friends.

"Friends are always comparing grades," Enghofer said. "It is a constant competition."

Hittin' the books

With a tennis racket and a golf club in hand, Junior Stoten Stofko balances his physics book on his head. "I come home and study, but sometimes it's hard, especially math," said Stofko. He explained that the hardest part occurs when seasons intersect, and he has practice after practice.

School vs. sports

With school time already taking up most of a teenager's life, the homework, projects and tests only add more demands and stress to everyday life. To put sports on top of that seems like an almost impossible task. However, many students seem to balance everything with relative ease.

Freshman Ryan Stokes said, "You just have to focus, and manage everything wisely."

Junior Drew Dawson agreed. "Make sure one thing is done before going to the next. When you're in school, you can't be thinking about the game that night, and when your playing a game you can't be thinking about class that day."

Both Stokes and Dawson played several sports throughout the year. When one sport would end, another would start. They both said that they loved it all, and they would not want it any other way. However, playing more than one sport and going to school is not as easy as it looks.

Senior Beaudilio McClendon said, "It does get pretty stressful sometimes. During baseball season, I would have four games a week, get home real late, then do homework and then only get like four hours of sleep."

Senior Tamara Gaddy gave a tip to other students who would like to excel in both sports and academics. "Put your heart and soul into everything, and just do it."

Hurrying to run from practice to practice, Sophomore Karen Balko tries to find time to study. "I play soccer and swim. The only time I have to do my homework is as soon as I get home from practice," said Balko. She agrees it is hard sometimes, yet she maintains a 3.5 GPA.

Trying to find a balance between after school activities and schoolwork, Senior Kiomara Vega splits her time. "I have a 3.7 GPA, and I enjoy balancing the two," said Vega. She has played softball for three years and has danced for two years.

With his books and a football in hand, Freshman Keith Pavlish balances his school work and after school activities. "I think it's easy to balance between the two because the practices aren't that long," said Pavlish. He said he has never fallen behind in class and keeps his 3.2 GPA.

Working at the offset press, Senior Roger Pesnaux prints everything from detention forms to calendars. During the summer, Pesnaux enjoyed working with Mr. David Teeter in the Press Shop. "It helped me prepare for this year. I learned stuff from Mr. Teeter that I use this year," Pesnaux said.

Having a handful

Students get involved in class using more than their brains. Participating in hands-on classes gives them an opportunity to express themselves creatively.

In the Graphic Arts room, Junior Jennifer Dietrich works on a masking sheet. Dietrich's main responsibility was the dark room, to prepare for offset printing jobs. "I like the class a lot. It's easy, and you get time to do things," Dietrich said.

Doing his job, Junior Edwin Tirado Jr. takes care of the embroidering in the Press Shop. Tirado took orders from the school, and then he made most of the designs. "It's a good class," Tirado said. "I picked it because I wanted to try something new."

While Senior Matthew Braatz prints tee-shirts for a school event, Mr. David Teeter watches and makes sure that Braatz doesn't have any problems. Since Mr. Teeter took over Graphic Arts in 1986, he has added more machines to the Press Shop to be able to produce more. "Most of the stuff that is used on a daily basis on the school, like homework slips and papers with the school's logo, we make," Mr. Teeter said.

Students are well aware of the basic courses that teach all the familiar subjects: Math, English, Science and History. However, some do not realize the many courses that give hands-on experience.

Press Shop, for example, does all the printing for the school using a printing press, which can be faster and more effective than a commercial printer. Everything from the Pirate calendar and parent newsletter to detention and tardy slips are printed in this class. Also, many of the signs and banners around the hallways are done in Mr. David Teeter's Press Shop.

In addition to the everyday paper products printed in the class, students get the opportunity to create things such as invitations, business cards and envelopes.

"I enjoy printing the shirts the most, but I never knew how much work actually goes into it before," said Senior Matt Braatz.

Tee-shirt printing is another project the class works on, and many of the shirts made go to different Pirate sports and academic teams and organizations.

Students can also find other hands on courses offered by Family and Consumer Sciences. Students in FACS classes have the opportunity to learn how to prepare various types of foods, from the most traditional to the more exotic, cultural cuisine.

Course work also emphasizes how to set a table properly and serve the prepared food in an appealing way.

FACS courses include Cake Decorating, Foods I, Foods II and Child Development. These classes are considered to be enjoyable by both the kids and the staff.

Mrs. Carol Von Behren said that she enjoys both teaching and working with the students.

After several hours of work, Senior LaDarra Selmon is ready to have her cake graded by Miss Carol Von Behren. All the students completed a tiered wedding cake, using what they learned during the semester. "They have to show the skills they've learned," Miss Von Behren said. "They get the grading sheet ahead of time, because I don't think it should be a surprise how they are graded."

In the Child Development class, Senior Sidney Miller plays with 3-year olds Isabella Azcona and Alenah Geurrero. Miller has taken the class two years. "I've learned how to take care of kids. It's not as easy as it looks like, but I like it," said Miller.

In foods class Sophomore Roosevelt Williams finishes manicotti. They made different foods, but making cookies became Williams' favorite. "We learned to make different types of cookies. After I learned how to make them, I make more cookies at home," said Williams.

Making her final project, Senior Jacqueline Bella makes flowers for her wedding cake. Bella said she was very satisfied with her finished product. "I showed people pictures of my wedding cake, and now they want me to do theirs," said Bella.

With a cake that reads "Happy Birthday" in Danish, Senior Trine Eskesen celebrates her 16th birthday with her new friends. Making new friends in a foreign country had ranked as one of Eskesen's biggest fears. "I had hoped to make this many friends," she said. "It makes it so much easier."

Following a point, Senior Christian Mathys stares down his opponent across the court. Mathys worked his way up the Boys' Tennis Team to play at the No. 2 singles position. "That was the first thing I did here. They were the first friends I made," Mathys said. "I really enjoyed it."

While the sun shines brightly, Senior Melissa Crossley sits in front of the coast in Peniscola, Spain. Peniscola, home to some of Crossley's favorite sites, became one of her favorite places. She said, "In Peniscola, I liked the castle in town, the coast and the beaches."

Whether they spent the summer abroad or stayed an entire year in a foreign country, some students chose to experience a foreign culture this year.

Melissa Crossley, a senior, became one of those students when she joined the Indiana University Summer Abroad Program.

"I really fell in love with the country," said Crossley on the two months she spent in Spain.

Crossley prepared for the trip by utilizing every study period practicing her Spanish.

She said, "It was hard to communicate when I first got there, but I got used to the speed of their speech."

Crossley said her future ambitions include living a few years in Spain.

In contrast, Senior Trine Eskesen and Senior Christian Mathys spent a year away from home while attending Merrillville High School. Mathys commented on his first impression of the United States when he said, "Everything is a lot bigger and cheaper here."

Mathys, whose native country is Switzerland, said he was very nervous before he got here but thought that everyone was very friendly.

Eskesen, who is from Denmark, said the biggest difference between her home and Merrillville is that "school is so much more strict here."

Eskesen said she made a lot of new friends who she hopes she can stay in touch with in the future, and she would like to come back and visit the United States again.

Between the Indiana University Program and the Foreign Exchange Program, students continued to expand their horizons this year.

As she sits high above the ground in the Tower de los Seranos, Senior Melissa Crossley poses in front of a view of Valencia, Spain. Crossley's summer trip helped her to realize she might want to return to Spain. She said, "I don't know exactly when, but I would want to go back and live there. I'd like to teach Spanish and history or a mix of them both."

Crossing borders

"It's a once in a lifetime experience to see how different the United States is from the rest of the world."

— Senior Melissa Crossley

Standing with friends from the IU Honors Program, Senior Melissa Crossley poses in an entrance to a castle in Sagunto, Spain. Crossley stayed with a Spanish woman as her host "mother" and a girl from Germany. Crossley said, "It's a once in a lifetime experience to see how different the United States is from the rest of the world."

Taking a break on her skis, Senior Trine Eskesen poses for a picture on a snowy slope. Eskesen found skiing to be a familiar experience. Eskesen said, "I have skied for like 12 or 13 years. My family goes away to Austria to ski every year."

Finished eating, new friends, Seniors Drake Branda and Christian Mathys, goof around during lunch. The tolerance for goofing around and breaking rules became one of the major differences Mathys noticed between the United States and Switzerland. He said, "It's a lot stricter here, and there are so many rules here."

Lying in coffins, Seniors Trine Eskesen, Megan Lee and Katherine Kaplar visit Six Flags during the Halloween season. Six Flags became just one of Eskesen's new experiences. Eskesen said, "I've really only been here for a few months, but it feels like a year because I've had so many new experiences."

As she shows the next step, Mrs. Barb Dlouhy helps President of Aktion Club, Senior Daniel Avery, make his rocket. Members in the Aktion Club have volunteered in activities such as the Campus Cleanup and the Christmas Wish List during the school year.

As a final touch for the rocket launch, Junior Russell Parkhurst cleans his rocket. Parkhurst said one of his favorite moments with the Aktion Club included seeing the movie "Eight Below" and going to dinner afterward with all of his friends. Parkhurst is the treasurer of Aktion Club.

For a second year, Aktion Club members continued their goal of giving back to the community.

Aktion Club is a division of Kiwanis Club that cooperates with Key Club to complete community service projects. Comprised of 12 special needs young adults, Aktion Club met once a month to plan these activities.

Mrs. Barb Dlouhy has returned as the sponsor of this club. Club members benefit by being allowed the opportunity "to interact with other people and show the community what they can do," she said.

This year, Aktion Club members helped out at the carnival for Riley Hospital for Children and collected pop tabs for the Ronald McDonald Charity Foundation. They also worked at a soup kitchen in Gary, filled the school's vending machines and helped assemble the school's newsletters and student newspaper.

Mrs. Dlouhy said she feels that Aktion Club is been a great experience for its members.

"It's been very positive," said Mrs. Dlouhy. "It's been great to see the kids so happy."

Lights, Camera, Aktion!

With small adjustments to the camera, Senior Krystall Marshall makes sure everything is where it should be. Marshall has been part of PNN for two years, last year as a morning announcer and this year as an anchor on the Friday Show. Marshall said that being on PNN has taught her to speak clearly and with poise. She said she is planning to major in broadcast journalism.

You're on the air!

Continuing their job of bringing news to MHS, The Pirate News Network (PNN) had a productive year.

For the second year in a row, the Indiana Association of School Broadcasters named PNN the Indiana Television School of the Year. They also won nine individual awards, including first place in TV News Magazine and Best Live TV Anchor. Senior Susan Ware, who was the winner of the Best Live TV Anchor award, said she "felt really happy and proud" upon hearing her name called as winner.

Ware, who wants to pursue a career in broadcasting, said she believes PNN gave her good practice.

"It was a good learning experience, I was very lucky to have such a great advantage," said Ware.

Fellow PNN member Senior Krystall Marshall, who has been a part of PNN for the last two years, joined because she said she "wanted to be on TV after watching the show freshman year."

Now in his fifth year as adviser to PNN, Mr. Mark Ciesielski said the purpose of PNN is "to give students a hands on experience of how broadcasting and video equipment runs."

For this class, students were required to learn how to interview a source, put together a news story and work with a camera.

To next year's members, Marshall advises "to keep up the good work and stay focused."

With last minutes adjustments, Senior Persche Bradley prepares before the opening of The Morning Show. Bradley was one of the main anchors on The Morning Show this year. She said she enjoyed taking PNN and added that PNN will help her begin her broadcasting career.

Quickly glancing down the list of songs, Senior Analay Carrera decides which song mix should be played during the opening of The Morning Show. Carrera says the class was fun because she was able to meet new people. One of the things she enjoyed most in PNN was editing segments on the computer.

As they prepare to go on the air, Seniors Kierra Givens and Melody Gomez discuss what news they will broadcast. Both girls agreed that being responsible and making deadlines was an important part of PNN. Gomez said, "It is very important to trust one another to be responsible."

Talent shows, dances and other social events throughout the school year are all part of the social life of high school students. During these different events, they come to a better understanding of themselves and their classmates.

Whether students are donating to a food or clothing drive or attending a talent show to support friends, they join together for a common purpose, to show how much they care. Showing the community their appreciation is another important aspect of student life. Community service organizations enable students to make a difference in the lives of those less fortunate. Other clubs, such as the foreign language clubs, allows students to learn about different cultures.

Regardless of the club, the interaction with each other allows students to grow socially. Often, they realize leadership skills and become the leaders of the future.

After counting the items from the Thanksgiving Food Drive, Student Government member Senior Krystle Gill said over 1,000 items were collected from the drive. Student Government sponsors the drive annually, and although plenty of items were collected, the number was still significantly lower than previous years.

On stage at the Revue 2006, Junior Jafar Abdul-Hafiz plays his soprano saxophone. Abdul-Hafiz said he only spent about three weeks practicing because he already had an idea of what he wanted to play. Abdul-Hafiz said, "I think this show is really important because it gives the students an opportunity to show their different talents."

Sophomore Michael Rivera pours himself a drink as his date, Junior Katelyn Corman, looks on. This was both Rivera and Corman's first time attending the Freshman-Sophomore Winter Formal, and both agreed they had a "great time." Corman and Rivera said they enjoyed dancing the most.

Homecoming Week

As he shouts with enthusiasm during the Parade, Senior Justin Belko expresses his "Pirate Pride." Whether he was hollering at basketball games or painting his chest during football season, Belko got the crowd going with his spirit.

As they sit around the back of a convertible, Seniors Callie Lucas, Evan Parker, Cambria Hollingsworth, Erica Aloia, Asia Carter, James Aldridge and Porsche Bradley ride in the parade. Parker and Aldridge were the 2005 football captains, while the ladies were on the Homecoming Court. "Football Court is cool because you get to be involved in the parade and other festivities," said Lucas.

Drenched in pudding, Junior Benjamin Spires slides down the chocolate covered path at the 2005 Goofy Games. The Pudding Slide has become a popular event at the Homecoming festivities.

With their "twinkie" hairstyles, Seniors Niki Kraska, Holly Floyd, Megan Lee and Katherine Kaplar get creative for Spirit Week. With Throwback Thursdays and Class Color Day, Spirit Week was a way for the student body to get involved with the excitement surrounding the upcoming Homecoming Game.

With biceps flexed, Seniors Edward Flores, Colt Contreras, Vagce Gidley and Armando Bravo sit atop the float at the Homecoming Parade. "It felt like we were number one and above everybody else standing in (at the Homecoming Game) we felt like we were number one behind us," said Bravo.

Waiting for the announcement of the next position, Freshman Amanda Spudic, Seniors Ashley Thomas and Jacqueline Bella and Sophomore Morgan Mosley attempt to keep their balance during a game of Twister. Thomas said the Goofy Games are "an awesome experience. Every student should get involved in the games at least once during their high school experience."

Playing Batman, the "Caped Crusader," Junior Brian Pucher flips in midair as he marches with his fellow Junior Class. The class floats are a major part of the spirit surrounding Homecoming Week, with themes that change each year. "I liked the superhero theme because little kids really got into it. They really thought I was Batman," said Pucher.

Show your spirit!

One of Student Government's main jobs throughout the school year includes organizing Homecoming Week, or Spirit Week.

During this week, students could have participated in each day's theme. This year consisted of Pink and Black Day, Throwback Day, Twin Day, Purple and White Day and Class Color Day.

"I think the Pink and Black Day was my favorite," said Senior Krystle Gill, president of Student Government. "There was a lot of participation."

Not only can students participate in each day's theme during Spirit Week, but Goofy Games are also part of Student Government's planning.

"This year we had a lot more participation and a lot more encouragement," said Gill about the Goofy Games.

Games included a Pantyhose Race, Balloon Launch, Pudding Slide and a new game this year called the Pudding Surprise.

The Homecoming Parade was yet another aspect of Spirit Week organized by Student Government.

Student Government held meetings, threw out ideas and voted on the Homecoming Parade's theme: Superheroes.

Senior Megan Lee said she liked the senior float the best because of the "super Pirates" who were throwing flaming footballs at enemies.

"We got a lot more people to participate, and the senior class was involved more," said Lee.

Since Student Government's advisor was out, it was up to the students to organize the whole week, Gill said.

Senior Jarryn Robinson said, "I think Student Government did a good job organizing. It was enjoyable for everyone."

Senior Leigh Nelson said, "Student Government was really organized this year with the whole week."

Bound together by panty hose, Juniors Bradley Kurczynski and Katrina Makarounas show a little hustle and teamwork at the '05 Goofy Games. Makarounas said, "'05 definitely dominated. We came to win and showed everyone what we are about. I still have the panty hose."

"It tasted like chocolate pudding and baby powder. It was magically delicious," said Junior Carla Emmett. Emmett and her '07 team for the "Pudding Surprise" activity placed first at the Goofy Games. "It was because of my leadership...we definitely pulled through," said Emmett.

Sitting on the back of a pickup truck, Seniors Tiffany Taylor and Xiomara Vega wave to the crowd along with the rest of the MHS Poms Team. Many teams, clubs and other extra-curricular activities participated in the Homecoming Parade. Taylor said that the parade was "enjoyable because a lot of people came out to see us."

As they relax at the dance, Junior Kyle Yarnell and Sophomore Gabriela Miller sit down to take a break from dancing. The Homecoming Dance had a place where students could unwind from dancing, snack on food, and mingle with friends. Miller said, "The whole night was great. I had fun getting ready and then being at the dance with my boyfriend."

Doing what he calls the "Brett Beatty" move, Junior Brett Beatty dances with his friends. "Going to the dance was a time for me and friends to go wild," said Beatty. The Homecoming Dance is Beatty's favorite memory of the school year.

With friends by their sides, Sophomores Desiree Upshaw, Jamille Maynard and Marissa Kendrick dance the Makarena. "We went to the dance as friends," Kendrick said. "It was a lot of fun."

With the music playing, Seniors Stacy Adams and Nathan Chandler dance the night away. Adams said, "The whole night was great, both the dance and after the dance." Many couples went out to eat and to visit at friends' houses after the dance.

Giolas Photographer Andy Garcia puts Freshman Ryan Schafer and his date, Lauren Gilmore, in position for their formal dance picture.

As they embrace arm in arm, Senior Dustin Nikolich and Junior Melissa Rinkenberger of Hebron dance together as a couple. Nikolich said, "It felt like she spent ten hours getting ready. It only took me five minutes, but it was well worth it."

Doing the Pancake, a popular move, Junior Cody Dallas dances with his friends. "My favorite part of Homecoming was being with my friends and dancing all night," said Dallas.

With Crown Point graduate Tance Dordieski, Senior Analy Carrera laughs and enjoys her time at the dance. "We went to Chicago after the dance. The whole night was a lot of fun," said Carrera.

As they sport attire to match the Las Vegas theme for the dance, Senior Jonathan Woodward and Junior Amanda Povey both wear sunglasses with their outfits for a celebrity feel. Woodward said, "We wanted to give a little more pizzazz to our outfits."

Being raved up by his peers, Senior Derek Midkiff dances with all his friends. "I remember the song was really hard to dance to," Midkiff said, "so we just all decided to just make fun of it and goof off, and that's how I ended up in the air." Different styles of dance were seen all throughout the dance.

Night in Vegas

Flashing lights, loud music and a dancing crowd were only part of the fun at this year's Homecoming Dance.

Members of Student Government spent most of the day and afternoon decorating and preparing for this night.

The theme, "Viva Las Vegas," was agreed upon as being a step away from last year's theme of "Mardi Gras." Student Government President Krystle Gill said she believed the theme from this year was "more fun and less romantic." The students experienced a lot of fun dancing to upbeat music from a disc jockey. Students were also able to pose for formal pictures with Giolas Photographers in couples or group pictures. When they were not dancing, attendees of the dance were able to talk with their friends and enjoy refreshments in the lounge. Students also received a keepsake keychain to remember their night in Vegas.

After the dance many students went out to eat or made other plans with their dates or groups of friends. Senior Krystal Marshall, who attended the dance the year before, went single and said she had an enjoyable evening with her friends.

"Afterward I went to Friday's with a bunch of my friends and we had a really good time," said Marshall.

Senior Elaine Hall also experienced a memorable night at the dance.

"Homecoming was a lot of fun and I was glad to go to one of the last dances of my senior year," said Hall.

Reigning Royalty

Dressed in their formal wear, the Homecoming nominees lined up to hear whose name would be announced as Homecoming King, Queen and Princesses.

"I didn't want to go because I thought I was going to lose," Senior Brian Reese said. "I went in not caring if I won or lost so I wouldn't be disappointed."

However, Reese's name was announced as Homecoming King and Senior Jena Bult was honored as Homecoming Queen.

"It was exciting. It was really unexpected," Bult said.

Homecoming Princesses included Junior Blair Mitchell, Sophomore Brianna Uersy and Freshman Lorielle Johnson.

Mitchell said getting nominated was a big deal.

After being crowned Junior Homecoming Queen, Blair Mitchell looks into the crowd. "I was happy and definitely surprised," said Mitchell. She added that no one really knew who was going to win.

"There are a lot of girls in '07, and only ten were picked," Mitchell said.

"I was happy," Uersy said. "I was going up against a lot of girls."

Johnson said getting nominated "means someone is caring enough to nominate you for something important."

"It felt good knowing everybody knew I won," Johnson said. "I felt special."

Key Club members "run the voting, crown, present flowers and delegate other groups to decorate" for Homecoming, said Mrs. Carrie Bedwell, sponsor of Key Club.

Mrs. Bedwell said that the cheerleaders decorated the front doors of the school and the members of the Pom Oin squad decorated the locker room.

As he bends down, Senior Brian Reese receives his crown as Senior Homecoming King, while junior nominees Angela Cast and Madeline Govert watch. "I was surprised and excited," said Reese.

With smiles on their faces, Seniors Vance Gidley and Callie Lucas clap as Senior Jena Bult is announced as Homecoming Queen. "Jena is a really nice girl and deserved to win Homecoming Queen," said Lucas.

Clapping for each of the Senior King nominees, Senior Ashley Thomas, alongside Senior Beaudilio McClendon, anxiously awaits her turn. "I was surprised [to be nominated] because I've never been on court before," said Thomas.

Preceding the crowning, junior Amy Gurney poses for a picture. "I was honored to be nominated with such a great group of girls," said Gurney. She said the nomination was a surprise.

As for the coronation, senior Jena Bult receives her crown for Senior Homecoming Queen as Seniors Joseph Lucas, Joseph Lobodinski and Ashley Thomas look on. "I didn't think I was going to win because that was never me. I was surprised," she said.

Before the crowning, Seniors Beaudilio McClendon and Brian Reese wait on the court. "I didn't think I would even be nominated for Homecoming this year since I won Prom King last year," said McClendon.

Patently awaiting the announcement of the Junior Homecoming Queen, juniors Angela Cast, Madeline Govert and Amy Gurney stare into the crowd. Govert said, "I was happy to be nominated and shocked."

Standing among the nominees, juniors Blair Mitchell and Amy Vargas flash smiles to the crowd. "It was odd to be nominated. Blair was the right person to win," said Vargas.

After the crowning, Seniors Joseph Lobodinski and Jena Bult pose for a picture together. "Jena deserved to win, and I'm happy for her. I was shocked I even got nominated," said Lobodinski.

Sophomore Jonathan Satkoski and Sophomore Nathan Barnes move around to the rhythm of the song. Satkoski said, "I really enjoyed myself. All of the different types of music had to have been my favorite part." The types of music played included rap, pop and country.

As they move to the music, Freshman Jordan Johnson and Junior Kiara Smith dance. Johnson said, "I love dancing, The Cha Cha Slide was my favorite part."

Dancing the popular Electric Slide, everyone moves to the beat of the music. Senior James Rowe said, "The Electric Slide is a great dance. Everyone knows it and we all had a fun time doing it."

On the floor Junior Darrius White dances with his friends. Darrius said that the dance lasted two hours and went very smoothly.

Once they were inside the dance, Sophomore Jim Releford puts a corsage on the arm of his date, Sable Robinson. "We had a great time at the dance. It was fun and we had fun together," said Releford.

As he relaxes, Freshman Nolan Soloman sits and talks to Brittany Alamillo from Valparaiso. "I had a great time, especially being there with my girlfriend. I would definitely go again," said Soloman.

On the dance floor, a group of friends step to the beat of the music. "I had a lot of fun at the dance. It was fun getting dressed up," said Freshman Mercedes Forsell.

Dance with me

"No one sat down. Everyone was dancing the entire time unless they wanted a drink or a snack," said Ms. Barb Dlouhy, Special Education teacher. The Inclusion Dance was held February 16 in the school cafeteria.

About 80 people attended the dance including the special needs students, graduates of the program and peer helpers that help in the class.

"We see a need for a social outlet for the kids, and dancing is something that everyone enjoys. The students like to share fun times just like any other kid," said Ms. Dlouhy.

"The difference in this year's Inclusion Dance is that we taped it so that the students could look and watch the tape in class or even buy it," said Ms. Dlouhy.

The boy's Basketball Team also attended the dance.

"Oh what a spark the team brought to the dance. The students were already enjoying the dance, but when they saw the team walk in, the looks on their faces were great. The team danced with the students the whole night. Everyone had fun," said Ms. Dlouhy.

dance with his team and had a "great" time.

"I don't think that we sat down all night. It was so much fun, and we could tell the kids really enjoyed us being there," Anderson said, "There's no doubt about it," that he would attend another Inclusion Dance.

February 17 was another night for yet another dance. The Winter Formal was also held in the school's cafeteria. Sophomore Jessica Matheny attended the dance and won Winter Formal Queen.

"It was really cool. I didn't think that I was going to win, but I told my friends to vote for me and I won. It was nice," said Matheny.

Matheny is in FCCLA, the club that sponsored the Inclusion and Winter Formal Dances. Matheny said that both of the events took months to prepare.

Junior Justin Camisa attended the dance with his girlfriend, Sophomore Katie Wilson.

"The dance was great. We danced a lot and just had a lot of fun," said Camisa.

"I'm pretty sure that everyone at the dance had a great time," said Camisa. "It's just fun memories."

As he gazes at his date, Junior Justin Camisa dances with Sophomore Katie Wilson. "The whole thing was fun. We both really liked the chocolate fountain that they had," said Camisa.

Receiving the crown, Sophomore Jessica Matheny is crowned princess at the Winter Formal. Matheny said, "I was really excited and surprised, I felt very honored." Matheny was voted princess by her classmates.

While at the Winter Formal, Freshman Adam Laturno and Mia Muhammad spend some time on the dance floor. "We both had a great time. It was our first dance together as a couple," said Laturno.

In the video floor, Juniors Lauren Hallenback, Rachel Johnson and Christopher Smith move around the dance floor. "I really enjoyed the music this year. They had a little bit of everything," said Johnson.

As they walk through the Grand March, Juniors Yvette Guzman and Drew Dawson smile before all the people watching. "The Grand March is fun because it is a good way to start off the whole night and gets everyone's moods up," said Guzman.

Waiting to go through the Grand March, Senior Kimberly Barnes waits with friends. "The Grand March was by far my favorite part. It was just a great opportunity to get to see everyone and what they were wearing," said Barnes.

Stepping out of the limo, Senior Tara Schreiber arrives at Avalon Manor for her prom. "Riding in the limo was a lot of fun. It is just something out of the ordinary life," said Schreiber. After the dance, Schreiber and her friends rode in the limo to Smokey Bones for dinner.

While they greet each other at the food table, Seniors Robert Aldrich and Adrian Gober look over their food options. "I thought the food was pretty good. They had a little of everything," said Gober.

On the dance floor, Senior Ryan Cameron and a student from Lew Wallace, Arneika Ervin, move to the music. "Dancing was by far my favorite part of the night," said Cameron.

Come away with me

As May 12 approached, many prom goers had these thoughts on their minds: looking for a dress or a suit, renting limousines, bearing a half day of school and setting up hair, nail and makeup appointments.

The gymnasium was packed for the Grand March, but before the march began, Seniors Beaudilio McClendon and Kamai Westbrook crowned the new Prom King and Queen, Juniors Drew Dawson and Angela Cast.

"At first I felt nervous, but when they said my name, I felt real good and excited," said Dawson.

Cast agreed. "It just topped my entire year. After swimming and Homecoming, winning (Prom Queen) topped it all."

With the theme of "Come Away With Me," Avalon Manor was decorated with all types of props related to sailing.

After four hours of eating, dancing and exchanging laughs, prom goers had a little more energy for a post-prom party. Senior Ryan Pozezanac and Junior David Richards II said they went camping after Prom. Junior Jessica Falls said she and a group of friends went out to eat in Merrillville and went to Six Flags Great America the following day.

After spending a lot of time in preparation and money — Dawson, for example, said he spent around $800 — many prom goers agreed that the preparations were all worthwhile.

Posing for a picture, the current Prom Court smiles at the Grand March. "Winning Prom Queen just topped off my whole entire year. It was a great feeling," said Junior Angela Cast.

Together, Seniors Brittany Jones and Kevin Wilson move on the dance floor. "The whole night was great. It wasn't what I expected, but I was pleasantly surprised," said Jones.

Members of the court, Juniors Melissa Darang and David Lobodinski dance the first slow dance of the night. "It was really nice being nominated for court. I enjoyed everything about it," said Darang.

At the Grand March, PNN adviser Mr. Mark Ciesielski interviews Senior Justin Burke. "All my expectations were fulfilled, and I especially loved dancing. I was a dancing machine," said Burke.

To help out at the Kids' Carnival, Senior Nyssa Brown paints flowers on children's faces. "I like painting, so it was a lot of fun making kids happy by decorating them," said Brown.

Sporting prom fashion, members of the Key Club show off the new styles. "The dresses were beautiful and the whole show went real well. We were very pleased with the outcome," said Junior Whitney Griggs.

Ready to pose for the prom fashion show, Junior Geoffery Sperting, Freshman Nolan Sullivan and Junior Victor Williams laugh together. "We all had a lot of fun, plus it was a plus that we helped raise money for someone who needed the money for prom," said Williams. The profits of the fashion show went to a girl who needed money for prom.

To bring a smile to children's faces, Junior Geoffery Sperting wears an Easter basket as headgear. "I thought it would be funny. I was just enjoying my time," said Sperting.

After they have eaten their share of chili, Mr. Robert Bedwell and Mr. James Stamper observe the Chili Cook-off. Stamper's outfit. "I would do anything to help support and benefit this event. I love how all the proceeds go to the Lupus foundation," said Mr. Stamper.

At the Chili Cook-off, Senior Shemeka Wright works the hot dog booth. "This was my first year doing Key Club," said Wright. "Doing community work is really important. I think what they are doing is great."

During the Kids' Carnival, Senior Teniqua Teamer helps a child with a taffy apple. "My favorite part was interacting with the kids. The whole idea of the carnival is great," said Teamer.

Running the Bozo Bucket stand, Senior Lorna Blondet helps out at the Kids Carnival. "This was my first time helping out at one of the Key Club's events. I really enjoyed it," said Blondet.

Lending a helping hand

Making an impact on the lives of many is something that Key Club members pride themselves on. Along with the guidance of five year club advisor, Mrs. Carrie Bedwell, the club has kept tradition with many projects as well as taking on a few new tasks.

"Watching the members grow and develop [as they participate] and seeing them realize their impact on the community is the best part," said Mrs. Bedwell.

The Key Club participated in "The Four Seasons," which included a project for each season. Also, they took on a new project called "Blankets of Love."

"Blankets of Love was a project we did with the elementary students," said the club's vice president, Junior Ashley Elser.

Also the club held it's annual big event, the Halloween Carnival for Camp Riley.

"It was a lot of fun because we got a moonwalk and a bunch of different games for everyone," said the club's president Sophomore Pedro Lara.

Besides the large projects that the club took on, there were also fundraisers and other charitable events. Helping out at the soup kitchen is a tradition among Key Club events along with the Senior Citizens' Prom and the Prom Fashion Show.

Sophomore Kimberly Nason said, "The Prom Fashion Show was a great success this year because it was more student-led than in previous years."

As they eat their dinner, Sophomores Michael Martin and Kyle Lamb enjoy themselves at White Rose restaurant. Martin said the German Club taught him how to play German Monopoly.

Scooping up more food, Seniors Diana Ramirez, Krystal Marshall and Raquel Guerrero enjoy a meal during their visit to Café Fondue with French Club members. Guerrero said the French Club is a way "to learn about other countries and the culture that they live in."

On a visit to the White Rose restaurant, members of the German Club check out the menu. Mr. Al Stoner said, "The White Rose is named after a student led Resistance Movement that opposed Hitler."

With glasses in their hands, Seniors Magen Fassoth and Alison Conquest make a toast with others at their table at Café Fondue. The club enjoyed cheese fondue, salad, chicken and chocolate fondue, said Fassoth, treasurer of the French Club.

As other senior National Honor Society members look on, Senior Katherine Kaplar, NHS President, speaks at the induction ceremony for juniors. "My speech was to explain what makes you a part of NHS. I introduced the background information," Kaplar said.

Sporting the official walkathon shirts, former Merrillville graduates Cathy Gaines and her brother, Steven Gaines, participate in the event sponsored by the National Honor Society. Mrs. Barb Dlouhy, an intense interventions teacher, said, "It was a lot of fun and well organized. Our special needs department appreciate the efforts. We hope NHS will help us next year because we can certainly use the extra funding."

As they lead the crowd, NHS members, Seniors Joseph Douglas and Harry Boskamp III, participate in the annual walkathon event. "It makes me feel good inside to help the people in need," said Boskamp.

With help from Senior Jarra Robins, Senior Aimee Ortega reads over her speech before the NHS induction ceremony. Ortega presented a speech about one of the characteristics of being a member of NHS. "It's fun being a member because we get together, thinking of ways to help the school and people," said Ortega.

With smiles on their faces, Juniors Desiree Walker and Maunya Jacobs walk in the SADD Candlelight Walk from Clifford Pierce Middle School to Merrillville High School. "It was a lot of fun because after we walked, we came back to the high school and went to the cafeteria to read poetry and had refreshments," said Walker.

Walking along with the crowd, Juniors Daniel Dwyer and Kyle Morris participate in the SADD Candlelight Walk. "I went because I wanted to support the fight against drunk driving. That was what the walk was all about," said Morris.

Despite the rain, Principal Mike Krutz and his son, Carson, walk with their candles. Mr. Krutz said, "I think it's important that teachers and faculty members take part in activities that student groups sponsor."

Preparing for the Freshman and Sophomore Winter Formal and the Inclusion Dance, Senior Tiffany Kedziora and Sophomores Katie Wilson and Felicia Kedziora hang decorations in the cafeteria. Felicia Kedziora's favorite activities this year were the preparations and the dances because "I was with all my friends and met new people as well."

To help prepare for the Inclusion Dance, Sophomore Natalie Lipp creates nametags. On hosting the Inclusion Dance, Lipp said, "I was happy to act as a host. It gave the special needs students something special."

After the Inclusion Dance, members of FCCLA enjoy pizza. "The members did an outstanding job carrying out all the details," said FCCLA sponsor Mrs. Carol VonBehren.

Reciting a poem at the STAND International Coffeehouse, Junior Harold Sallee speaks of the importance of bringing all people together. Sallee said he joined STAND to "break the walls of racism and help others understand the need for diversity."

During the International Coffeehouse held in the Clifford Pierce Middle School Cafetorium, members of STAND perform a skit about diversity. This year, STAND advisor Mr. Danny Lackey let the students run the entire program. "It went very well," he said.

As Senior Blake Sohacki plays the song, "Prelude in C," guests of the STAND International Dinner enjoy the entertainment. Sohacki said that the members are "a big family of future do-gooders."

Sharing her views about diversity and equality, Senior Danielle Roberts, President of STAND, reads a speech during STAND's International Coffeehouse. "The International Coffeehouse was my favorite event this year because it had a multicultural theme and included Starbuck's coffee," said Roberts.

Holding position at the Homecoming parade, Sopomore Kipp Moore, Senior Candace Jones, Senior Brandon Urquidi and Sopomore John Perkins wait for their turn to begin walking. "The parade was a lot of fun. It was a little bit hot, but I think that people enjoyed the show," said Urquidi.

Participating in the "Knock-out Drill", Sopomore Anna Acosta, Freshman Acacia Spencer and Sopomore Destiny Blink, hold the salute. "The drill really isn't hard. It just takes practice and participation. We do it all the time," said Blink

During a home football game, Sopomore John Perkins, Senior Brandon Urquidi, Senior Robert Lucente and Sopomore Kipp Moore present the colors. The Honor Guard performs during the National Anthem at home football games.

Standing in front of a staff meeting held in the AFJROTC classroom, new cadet, Senior Donald York, introduces himself to members of the staff. Members attended competitions in Ohio during the school year and won several first place awards for the Drill and Honor Guard.

"I was honored to be promoted to Corps Commander. It was an exciting moment," said Senior Candace Jones. Jones has been in AFJROTC for two years and was in charge of the Corps.

Standing for the National Anthem during the Change of Command Ceremony, the AFJROTC class stands quietly and honors the flag. The Corps attended the ceremony in the arena.

Being promoted to Vice Corps Commander by Senior Candace Jones, TSgt. Michael Miller, and Maj. Guy Ramey, Senior Brandon Urquidi, is thankful for all the hard work he put in the class to get this far. "This rank takes a lot of responsibility and effort to successfully fulfill your duties," said Urquidi.

Saluting Maj. Guy Ramey, Senior Candace Jones is promoted to Cadet Lieutenant Colonel. "The Corps commander oversees the whole corps, holds staff meetings, and everyone answers to me and I make sure that discipline is enforced," said Jones. Jones said that she was excited about the duties of a Corps Commander.

AFJROTC students take the lead

With opportunities ranging from drill team competitions to aerospace classes, Air Force Junior Reserved Official Training Corps members went into the year with a goal of becoming better citizens.

There are two main courses taught in this program: Leadership and Aerospace Science.

Major Guy Ramey explained the benefits of teaching the students leadership.

"This course makes the students better citizens," said Major Guy Ramey. "They learn basic military knowledge, how to react and respond, how to match, basic drills and how to properly wear uniforms."

The AFJROTC members not only learn about the military but also have the chance to compete on the Drill Team.

"The purpose of the drill is to help people pay attention to details," said Senior Brandon Urquidi.

This year marked the second year for the AFJROTC to compete in drill competitions.

"The drill team competitions are fun, but very hectic and demanding. They can make you very nervous, but they're rewarding experiences," said Senior Candace Jones.

The second course, Aerospace Science, teaches the students everything they need to know about flying an airplane.

"We teach the students the three main parts of Aerospace Science: the science of flight, aviation history and exploration space," said Sergeant Michael Miller.

"We learn what kind of things make up the airplane, what makes it fly and how it stays up," Urquidi said.

Some students taking this course also plan on taking AFROTC in college or joining the military.

"It's a passion of mine. I like the military structure and the discipline, and I'll also make good money and have all kind of benefits," Jones said.

Major Guy Ramey said he believes AFJROTC will help prepare students for the future.

He said, "The students can succeed when they leave here to be the best person they can be when they go out to the real world."

Student Government offers help throughout the school

From fundraisers for graduation to community service activities, members of Student Government and class officers continued to help people this year.

Senior Krystal Gill, the Student Government president, thought the year went better than expected.

The Student Government members coordinated the Homecoming Week festivities, the Thanksgiving food drive and Stress Free Week and sold Orange Crush to raise money for Riley Hospital for Children.

"I have really enjoyed Student Government, and it makes me realize how many great people there are out there," said newly appointed District Representative Sophomore Pedro Lara.

The class officers also accomplished great things, said Senior Class Treasurer

Heather Zurek. The list of activities included fundraising for senior activities such as graduation and the Senior-Faculty Basketball Game.

Junior Richard Reddick said he believes that his experience as class president will help him in his future.

Reddick said, "I took on this position because I wanted to learn leadership traits that I could use in my future."

To lend a helping hand, Senior Krystle Gill packs food for the Thanksgiving Food Drive. "All of our events this year were really successful. We had a lot of support from the school which definitely made a difference," said Gill.

Showing his school spirit, Mr. Nick Petralia smashes the car during Homecoming Spirit Week. Mr. Petralia will be the next year's Student Government sponsor.

Sorting through donations, Senior Nicole Silbersdorf helps Student Government members with the Thanksgiving Food Drive. This project was one of many events sponsored by the Student Government.

Taking the stage at a concert or theatrical performance is the reward for the students' hard work.

Months of practices and rehearsals prepare performers for a flawless presentation. After months of training, students in choir, band, orchestra and the theatre arts classes anxiously anticipate performing for an audience.

The expectation is to execute an ideal performance, and this requires remarkable dedication.

The styles of different performers draw audiences to the shows put on by students. The excitement surrounding performances brings in crowds who appreciate the dedication of students who are learning a new craft.

All entertainers strive for a great performance, and ultimately, everyone looks forward to an experience that is fun and enjoyable.

Taking her turn in the spotlight, Senior Morgan Gill sings during the choir's winter concert. After preparing for about a month, Gill said she felt ready and was not too nervous to take center stage. Achieving better tone and pitch are Gill's greatest accomplishments since the beginning of her singing career in high school choir.

Reading his music at the orchestra's winter concert, Sophomore Pedro Lara focuses on his performance and hitting the right notes. Lara has been playing the violin for six years and said the hardest part of preparing for a concert is "playing in unison."

On stage during the fall performance of "Children of Eden," Senior Brittany Jones plays the character of Eve. Although Jones prepared for a month before the performance, she said "getting into character" was the hardest part of the play.

Trumpeteer Edwin Smith, a freshman, performs a horn move during halftime. The marching band is an Indiana State School Music Association district and regional qualifier that marched in the Chicago Thanksgiving Day Parade, Walt Disney World's Magic Music Days, the Outback Bowl and in the Bahamas.

Members of the band perform in their annual winter concert. The concert featured Christmas songs like, "When Angels Weep" and "Sleigh Ride." Mr. Bob Myers, the head band director, was pleased with the concert. Mr. Myers said, "This was one of the better concerts we have ever had."

With their eyes on the drum major, Senior Scott Stephen and Sophomore Corbin Massa watch to stay in step with the rest of the marching band with. Stephen, a member of the percussion, or drum line, has been marching with the band for all four years of his high school career. He said, "I stayed in band because I have a lot of friends in band and because I like the percussion section." Stephens said he would like to join a band or musical club when he gets into college.

As she marches, Jaclyn Nason, a sophomore, points her trumpet up to reverberate her music to the crowd. Nason said she was pleased with the marching band season, but thought that they could have done better. She said she will continue participating in band in the future. Nason said, "I like marching band because you make art on the field with over a hundred different people and you become a family."

As he plays his saxophone, Freshman Desmond Jones joins his fellow Pep Band Members, Freshmen Taylor Douglas and Joshua Stacker in the playing of the school song. Jones has been in band since middle school and said his favorite part of the band was playing his alto saxophone. He said, "I like the smooth and warm sound it makes."

Performing during the "Tiempo Latino" routine, Junior Jafar Abdul-Hafiz plays his soprano saxophone in harmony with the rest of the marching band. Abdul-Hafiz, the first chair of the saxophone section, said he has not decided if he wants to play his saxophone in college, but would definitely like to play as a hobby.

Marching band members take a pause in their marching to play the climax of their show. Their routine involved music and dance from South America. The band had a successful season and advance to the regional portion of the state marching band competition.

Band keeps on playing

One could find the Pirates Marching Band performing their "Tiempo Latino" routine during halftime at every varsity football game or competing at any six of their season's competitions. The Marching Band is made up of freshmen through seniors. Rain or shine, the Band of Pirates took the field at every performance and put on a show.

The band performed at six competitions this season, and although the Pirates did not advance past Regionals this year, they are very hopeful for their future.

Band Director Mr. Bob Myers said, "We had a lot of very talented freshmen this year, but they were just too inexperienced."

Mr. Myers also said the band's success was dependent on the guidance and leadership of its upperclassmen, and because of the small number of seniors who participated this season a successful season was a tough accomplishment.

Senior David Lopez stated, "For the band to make it past Regionals next year, they need to practice, practice and practice."

The difficulties of getting a large group of teens together during the summer days to put together a show also proved a challenge.

Lopez discussed the most difficult part of band was not putting on the show, but "bringing everyone together to clean up the routine because everyone is just so busy."

Sophomore Corbin Massa agreed getting everyone together was tough, but added, "Everyone needs to take it [Marching Band] more seriously if we want to really improve."

While the band lacked seniors this year, Massa assured his class would improve their leadership techniques next season.

"I want us to get further next season, and if that means stepping up then we will," said Massa.

The seven months of planning and practicing start in January to decide what show will be performed for the upcoming season. Mr. Myers said, the planning starts early in order to be sure the band can take on the show the directors pick. No specific guidelines are followed to pick a piece, but choosing a fun, unique and playable work are characteristics looked for in a possible show.

For next year, Mr. Myers said, "We have to receive a gold rating at Regionals." The Pirates will continue to practice three times a week to achieve their goal.

With flag in hand and ready to "toss a double," Junior Megan Fisch runs through her routine before a competition. "I've been competing for three years, and I really enjoy it, especially Winter Guard because it is more intense, and everyone gets really focused," said Fisch. For competitions, performers practiced sometimes three or more times a week.

While dancing, Sophomore Ashley Jimenez grabs her flag and does part of her routine. "This was my first year competing with Winter Guard. I really enjoyed it," said Jimenez.

As she practices her routine before a crowd of parents the night before a big competition, Junior Valerie Angotti twirls her flag in midair. "Competing is my favorite part of Winter Guard. I practice really hard," said Angotti. The Winter Guard Team competes during a winter season. In the fall, members comprise the Color Guard and perform with the band.

Spinning her rifle, Junior Michelle Deming twirls out on the football field. "I like twirling rifles better than twirling flags. It is challenging and more difficult to learn," said Deming.

Performing on the field during halftime at a football game, Sophomore Shamira Malone completes her routine with the band. "I've been doing Guard for three years now, and I love it," said Malone. During their routines, Color Guard performers used various types of equipment, including flags and rifles.

The biggest misconception of us is that it is so easy that you don't have to practice.'

Dancing, twirling and moving to the music, the members of the Color Guard show off their talent. The members explained that the audience does not know how much talent and skill this performing art involves.

"The biggest misconception is that it is so easy that you don't have to practice. This is not it at all. Our practices are hard and have a lot of memorizing involved," said Junior Michelle Deming.

Coached by Mrs. Kristen Durnbaugh, who has marched for 15 years, the Color Guard team has two seasonal branches: Fall Guard and Winter Guard. Winter Guard competes against other teams, while Fall Guard performs with the band at half-time during football games.

The Color Guard started early their season with practices in the summer. These practices involved going over routines and technique.

"Our coach really helped out this season. She was the one to push us when no one else would," said Sophomore Katelynn Kora.

The Color Guard wrapped up their summer practices dancing alongside the band to prepare for their half-time routine. Throughout the year, Color Guard practiced three or more times a week. This sometimes meant they had to give up their Saturdays in order to become a better team.

When members of the Color Guard competed, they were judged in basic categories such as the general effect of their performance, how well they used their equipment (rifles, sabers and flags) and the emotion brought through their performance.

"Competing this season was a lot of fun," said Junior Megan Fisch. "We placed successfully and were able to watch the amazing things the other teams did."

Nailing the routine

Creation of generations

Offering the audience a backdrop of the Biblical reference of creation, the three leading roles try to reveal a theme. Choir Director Roger Emig filled the role of God, while Seniors Daniel Nieman II and Brittany Jones acted as Adam and Eve. Mr. Emig decided to perform in his first Merrillville High School production so that, "I could have a chance to be a singer and to interact more with the students."

Not long after the school year started, auditions were already taking place for the fall musical, "Children of Eden." This year's production included some old faces along with many new people who wanted to get into the action. Although this was some peoples' first time on stage, it does not mean that it hurt the performance. One surprise addition to the cast was Choir Director Roger Emig. Although Mr. Emig has played piano in the pit for many years, he never tried the onstage aspect of performing.

Mr. Emig, who played Father in the play, said, "I enjoyed being in character on and off stage. It was a wonderful experience."

Although Mr. Emig enjoyed the experience he said he still had feelings of "sheer terror" before going on stage. Along with Mr. Emig, many students played in lead roles for the first time. Seniors Brittany Jones, Donald Toth and Courtney Miller were some of the many new faces on stage. Along with these newcomers came some old faces in Seniors Daniel Nieman II, Sheena Mitchell and Junior Jaclyn Boskamp.

The play is loosely based on the first chapters of Genesis. Act One included the story of creation, the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden and the death of Adam's son Abel. Act Two included the story of Noah's ark and the flooding of the world. Although this play is set at the creation of the world, its characters can still be related to people today.

Toth said, "I relate with my character because I often fight with my family just like Cain and Japeth do in the play."

The play's theme can also be related to today. Nieman said, "Families will have trials and problems they have to endure, but they are still a family in the end."

As they sing their way through their roles as Yonah and Japeth, Junior Jaclyn Boskamp and Senior Donald Toth both reveal that singing was their favorite part of producing this musical. The fall musical brought together many individuals of different ages and backgrounds. "I enjoyed getting to know people better, especially seniors like Donald Toth," said Boskamp.

As the serpent tempts Senior Brittany Jones, her character Eve must decide her fate. The serpent was made up of Senior Megan Lee, Senior Niki Kraska, Junior Marcus Patikas, Senior Lindsey Trock and Junior Michael Cameron. Trock said, "It was really difficult to keep a straight face and act devious while playing the serpent."

Accompanied by a pit orchestra, the cast sings a song about generations of families while dancing in brightly colored costumes. The first act offered naturally colored costumes because it reflected nature and creation, while the second act included vibrant costumes to express the creativity of man. "This production had better costumes than previous shows we've done," said Junior Jaclyn Boskamp.

"... still a family in the end."

Revealing their feelings through musical lyrics, Cain and Abel, played by Senior Donald Toth and Junior Dwayne Johnson, offer the audience the prominent theme of the musical. Toth said the theme expressed "sticking with family because it's the most important in life."

Joined together at the family dining table, cast members Senior Donald Toth, Senior Courtney Miller, Junior Dwayne Johnson, Senior Sheena Mitchell, Senior Daniel Nieman II, Senior Joseph Mirales and Sophomore Elizabeth Martin illustrate the importance of family, a common theme in the musical. "The cast was a really close group. We got along well and put together an amazing show," said Nieman.

Performing to the beat, Senior Sheena Mitchell and the cast dance and sing to the music played by a their accompaniment. Choreography and song were the two of the main components of the production of this musical. "This was the most difficult musical I've done because I had to sing and dance simultaneously," Mitchell said.

'...every year gets better and better'

For performances and contests like ISSMA, the students in orchestra prepared daily.

"We practice in class everyday and some of the students even practice more at home," said Freshman Michele Myers.

Myers has been in orchestra for three years and plans on continuing for three more years. To Myers, the best part of orchestra is her instructor, Mr. John Bradford.

"Mr. Bradford is really cool. He always takes his time with us and he makes playing the violin fun," said Myers.

Sophomore Irene Lopez is also in orchestra and said she loves it.

"I've been playing since the seventh grade and every year gets better and better," said Lopez.

Her favorite part about orchestra is the concerts. Orchestra puts on several concerts a year: Halloween(Fall) concert, Christmas concert, pre-contest and contest concerts and Spring concert. They also perform at the February ISSMA contest and at Graduation.

Lopez thinks that her class is a strong class, and the music they put on is really enjoyable.

"We play jazz, classical, pop, songs from movies and things from the Beatles," said Lopez.

The class's goal this year was to do well at ISSMA and bring home trophies and awards in class pieces, solo pieces and group pieces.

In an effort to keep the orchestra together during the annual orchestra holiday concert, Mr. John Bradford conducts during a piece of music. "I was really happy with the talent that we had this year. The orchestra has really improved throughout the year, which made for a very successful concert and ISSMA competition," said Mr. Bradford.

As he reads the music, Sophomore Zachary Banks concentrates to make sure he is playing in tune. "I always try to keep focused while I am playing because if I don't focus then I get off key and the orchestra sounds bad," said Banks.

With their eyes on the music, Freshmen Caitlyn Spires and Michelle Myers play their violins in the annual orchestra holiday concert. Spires said that she chose to play the violin because an older friend that also played the violin inspired her. "I always went over to her house, and she would always play her violin for me," she said.

Flipping to the next page of his music, Sophomore Wyatt Perkins plays his string bass. "I really didn't choose to play the string bass. I was just given it. Now that I have played it for a while, I love it," said Perkins. Perkins earned a gold rating as a member of two ensembles that he participated in the state ISSMA competition.

Strings and other things

While he concentrates on playing his string bass, Senior Brian Albee plays with his fellow bassists. "I decided to be in orchestra because I couldn't sing, and I didn't want to be like everyone else and be in band." Albee was given the opportunity to play in the All-State Orchestra. He also spent the summer before his senior year touring Europe playing his string bass.

In the midst of playing, Senior Ebony Holly works on her posture during a day in orchestra class. "Orchestra has helped me relax whenever I am stressed. When ever I get stressed out I play my violin," said Holly.

As she plays with the orchestra, Sophomore Kristen Hoyles watches the fingerboard on her violin.

In the Christmas Concert, Freshmen Markella Papamihalakis and Kayla Haney perform on stage. "Performing has to be my favorite part about being in choir. That, and all the friends I've made," said Haney.

While at their concert, the Bell Choir performs for the audience. "I really enjoyed the group I had for Bell Choir this year. They worked really hard and worked well together," said Mrs. Melinda Reinhart.

Snapping to the beat of the music, Sophomore Josalyn Scaife and Freshmen Kelsi Pepper, Ashlynn Taylor and Sarah Polak keep their eyes on the audience. "Learning the routines was probably my favorite part about Concert Choir," said Scaife.

Dancing and singing, Freshmen Kelly Tarr, Kristin Alvarez and Trina Underhill perform at the Christmas Concert. "I like choir, especially performing, but learning the new songs and dances probably has to be the hardest part," said Alvarez.

Singing in harmony

Singing Christmas carols, Senior Crystalynn Roy, Junior Heather Walker, Seniors Cecilia Rivera and Shakeira Soto, and Sophomores Paula Ketchem and Vanessa Alexander look toward the Performing together, the boys from Concert Choir sing on stage. "Performing gives you an adrenaline rush. I love singing and performing," said Freshman Anthony Wright.

All at stance, the Concert Choir sings in unison. "Concert Choir is a lot of fun, especially performing," said Freshman Mandy Weis. The Concert Choir performs three times during the year.

With a new class, the Hand Bell Choir, Mrs. Reinhart has had to adjust to not only teaching the new freshmen in her Concert Choir and Varsity Choir but also to teaching this class for the first time.

"I've never really taught (Hand Bell Choir), but I've played," Mrs. Reinhart said. "Almost all of the girls played at Pierce."

This year was Sophomore Lindsey Hauber's first year doing hand bells. Hauber said they learned "different ways to play the bells and sightreading."

Not only was this a new class to teach, but it was also a class to equip.

"We had one set (of hand bells), and we borrowed from Pierce to get started," Mrs. Reinhart said.

Although Hand Bell Choir can be made up of people from any grade, Mrs. Reinhart said it was made up of all sophomore girls this year.

The Concert Choir is composed of girls from grades 10-12 and boys from grades 9-12, and the Varsity Choir is just freshmen.

Senior Renee Schmellmeyer is in Concert Choir, and she said she has been in choir for nine years.

"We've done a lot better this year, and the freshmen boys caught on faster," Schmellmeyer said. "Freshman year, I was really shy. I wouldn't get up and sing. Senior year, it's no big deal. I don't care if I'm used as an example (in class). My confidence level has changed."

All three choirs put on three concerts this year: the Christmas Concert, the Contest Concert and the Spring Concert.

Mrs. Reinhart said the Christmas and Contest Concerts "went really well."

"It's always a challenge because of the freshmen coming from Pierce. It's a challenge to gel as a group," she added.

In choir, "theory is important," said Mrs. Reinhart. "Watching how the melody goes is important."

Mrs. Reinhart said, "I'm finding that we're able to do more theory test. They are starting to do both pitch and rhythm at the same time. The class as a whole got it quickly."

'It's a challenge to gel as a group.'

Showing their choreography steps, the Vocalteen boys dance to "The Musical World of Walt Disney." One aspect of being in Vocalteens was the chance to have a dance partner. Since there was a shortage of boys in choir, many girls did not have partners but they said they still had a good time performing for audiences.

Side by side, Vocalteen girls dance to the songs of Disney's "Aladdin." The Vocalteens went on many field trips throughout the year, performing at various nursing homes, the Radisson and several banquets.

Singing "Home" from the Disney musical "Beauty and the Beast," Sophomore Nicole Hatch performs at her last MHS choir concert. Hatch will be moving to Germany with her family next year.

In a tiny cluster, Sophomores Pamela Agoris, Kathrine Harold and Debra Harstead and Junior Whitney Griggs echo their voices in the choir concert. Velveteens is an all-girl show choir, and many of the girls agreed that they made new friends.

'He (Mr. Emig) treats you as a friend as well as a student.'

While the Choralteen boys tell "A Whale of a Tale," the Choralteen girls listen. Many choir members agreed that "The Musical World of Walt Disney" was one of their favorite concerts. Senior Trine Eskesen said, "This was my first choir concert, and it was nice to see how everything worked together. It had some of my favorite songs, and the dances were fun."

During a slower song at the Christmas concert, several alto Velveteens sing in unison. Show choirs are not always known for just their dance steps. The show choir groups also sing many songs without choreography.

Entertaining the audience, Senior Jared Perkins boogies to the music. Perkins has been part of the MHS choir for four years and has been a Vocalteen for two years. Memorable moments for Perkins have been trips to Branson, Missouri, and Walt Disney World.

With four concerts in Reinhart Auditorium and several out-of-school performances, the advanced choirs of MHS were kept busy this school year. The students learned a variety of music in the fall, Christmas songs for the holiday season, songs from more classical periods in January and, for the last concert this school year, famous pieces from Walt Disney Pictures. In addition, the Vocalteen choir performed out of school during the year to spread the choir's name throughout the community.

The Vocalteens, Choralteens and Velveteens practiced after school twice a week throughout the year. Learning new music and choreography to go along with the songs, practices lasted anywhere from one to three hours. Choir members said that time flew by because of the great people they had the privilege of working with.

Sophomore Debra Harstead said that she enjoyed all the time spent with her fellow classmates.

"We get close to each other while participating and learned different things about one another," said Harstead.

The majority of the students involved have been singing all their lives. Many of them started in church and decided to expand their singing horizons with the help of the school system.

The choir members enjoyed each other's company and participating in something that has been a part of their lives for so long, but they said that all the fun would be in vain without the leadership of choir director Mr. Roger Emig.

Sophomore Taylor Madison said, "He's fun. It's a different bond with him because he gets to know you on a different level. He treats you as a friend as well as a student."

Show choirs entertain

Music makes spring break magical

While many kids were off bathing in the sun and sleeping in every day over spring break, a select few from Merrillville's music programs spent their week off performing music and relaxing with their classmates. The Merrillville Band spent the week in the Bahamas while Merrillville's Choralteens went down to Orlando, Fla to visit the many parks of Walt Disney World. The Band didn't perform at all over break, but saw many sights. They went to parts of Florida and later took a cruise ship to Grand Bahama Island. Sophomore Joshua Phillips, a trumpet player with the Symphonic Band, said the part that was most fun was "when we got to go on the beach and swim at the resort."

Freshman Vince Marquez also thought that swimming on the beach was enjoyable.

Marquez said, "The beaches were fun because of the swimming and the coral reefs."

The MHS Choir, on the other hand, performed twice, once in front of judges for a competition and the other on stage at Disney's Epcot Park. Junior Alexis Gedda, a member of Choralteens, said that performing in Florida was a little different from performing in Reinhart Auditorium.

"We were outside, so it was much hotter and everyone got up from where they were sitting and kept moving around," said Gedda.

Other students also noticed the heat during their performances. Sophomore Ian Hernandez said that "performing in 80 degree weather in tuxs" stands out in his mind the most about his trip with the choir.

In the Bahamas or at Walt Disney World, students involved in music at MHS seemed to have enjoyed their temporary vacation away from their regular lives as students.

As band members Juniors James Gedda and Kendall Sharp, Senior Allana Fleck and Junior Jaclyn Nason stop to take a group picture, they begin to spend their first day in Universal Studios. Fleck believed the best part of the trip was "the free time, sitting on the beach and being able to go snorkeling."

Junior Kendall Sharp and Senior Scott Stevens enjoy eating dinner at Viva Wyndam Fortuna Beach resort in the Bahamas. During this spring trip, band members traveled to both the Bahamas and Florida on a day cruise on the Discovery Cruise Line.

Talking amongst themselves, band members prepare to leave for Universal Studios Islands of Adventures park in Orlando, Florida.

Sophomore band member Jackie Nason said the trip "was very fun and awesome. We did a lot of traveling."

As they pose in front of the All Star Movies Resort at Disney World in Florida, choir members become a part of the "101 Dalmation" theme. Senior member Trine Eskesen said she had a good experience in Disney World. "It was so much fun being with my friends. I was happy to be there and have fun," said Eskesen.

"It was an awesome experience to be there..."

While walking around the amusement park, Junior Matthew Douglas and Senior Daniel Nieman II stop with Disney characters to pose for the camera. Pondering back on the choir trip, Nieman said, "It was an awesome experience to be there."

As director Mr. Rodger Emig plays the piano, choir members sing classical songs from their March concert. Choir members won third place in their Choral division in competition at Disney World.

Surrounding a statue of Goofy, choir members spend their day at Magic Kingdom amusement park. The spring trip is the only out-of-state trip the choir goes on every year. Senior choir member Lindsey Trock commented, "Goofy is my favorite character, and we thought the statue of Goofy was pretty sweet."

'I like to dance and to entertain.'

Whether they are singing, dancing, playing an instrument or reciting poetry, students get the opportunity every year to show off their talents in The Revue. The Revue is the biggest fundraiser for the MHS Dramatic Society, and the 2006 Revue proved no different.

To "spice" the program up a little bit, Mrs. Beverley Seaver decided to have different acts for different nights so students would have the opportunity to see more acts and an entirely different program each night they came. Each year, the show features a variety of acts that appeals to almost every member of the audience.

Junior Kenneth Polezoes, who went Wednesday night, said he enjoyed Senior Pedro Torres's performance the most.

"I liked Pedro the best, because he kept you interested the entire act," said Polezoes.

The audience sees the acts in front of them, but does not realize the work that goes into making the performances run smoothly. Sophomore

Cody Stewart, who juggled to AC/DC's "Thunderstruck," said that he prepared for about a month before the show. In addition to performers, the show consisted of emcees that introduced the acts and "techies" who worked behind the scenes.

Sophomore Alexandra McLaughlin was an emcee for The Revue and she said that she felt a little nervous in front of such a large audience.

"It's not really intimidating, but when they start making fun of you, it can be a little bit," said McLaughlin.

Junior Sirena Blas, who worked as a "techie," said there was a lot of confusion backstage.

"People don't know what to do or where to go, so I direct them around," said Blas.

Although disappointed with the crowd's reaction and etiquette during the two nights, Mrs. Seaver was pleased with the large numbers who came out to see the show.

"We had over 1,000 kids between the 2 nights. The quantity was what I was hoping for," said Mrs. Seaver.

Whether or not the show continues at MHS next year, the '06 Revue proved to be interesting for both the crowd and those who were involved.

Rocking to Blink 182's song "Going Away to College," Sophomore Joshua Crayne on bass, Freshman Tavon Cunningham on drums and Sophomore Eric Heidbreder on guitar and vocals perform at The Revue. Crayne said he was asked to be in the group to fill in for their bass player. "I learned the song in a day," said Crayne.

Three friends, Seniors Denise Coleman, Freshman Markella Papamihalakis and Senior Kristina Kratimenos dance to the song "My Number One" by Helena Paparizou. Papamihalakis said the group "wanted to do something because we've been friends for a long time."

The AC/DC song "Thunderstruck" sets the pace for Sophomore Cody Stewart as he juggles three balls during The Revue. "Mrs. (Beverley) Seaver asked me to juggle, and I said okay," said Stewart.

Dancing to a mix of songs, Senior Pedro Torres performs in The Revue. "I like to dance and to entertain," Torres said. Torres said Mrs. Beverley Seaver, director of The Revue, "does a good job" organizing the show.

Showing off talent

"No one has ever seen me dance and I wanted to bring something new (to The Revue)," said Sophomore Julie Stelzer. Stelzer performed a ballet to Fall Out Boy's song "Dance, Dance" in this year's Revue that she said took her a couple of months to prepare. Stelzer said she is involved with a ballet company that performs local shows, some at the Star Theatre.

As Senior Courtney Miller sings a song from "Wicked," Junior Jaclyn Boskamp watches her perform. Miller said, "I did it (The Revue) last year, and it was a lot of fun."

"I've been doing this in front of people for a long time," Senior Rochelle Waxton said about her rapping career. At The Revue, Waxton performed her song "By the End of the Road," which is about how a girl feels after being cheated on.

While remembering the past, June, portrayed by Sophomore Alexandra McLaughlin, recites a monologue. McLaughlin, who started acting in middle school, believes opening night went well. Her favorite part of the play was "all the make-up and getting to know the people better."

During a more serious scene, Henry T. Scott, played by Freshman Anthony Barns, tells his soon to be grandson Jesse Williams, portrayed by Senior Joey Mireles, about his life story. "Every role I've always had was comedic," said Mireles. "This was my first chance to take on a serious role."

While talking about how their father committed suicide, April Williams, played by Junior Michelle Deming, looks on as Grace Turner, portrayed by Senior Sharletta King, smokes a cigarette. Deming was involved in other plays before taking on this role. Deming said she believed the overall audience turnout for opening night was good. "I think all the people enjoyed it," said Deming.

Expressing her emotions, May Crawford, played by Senior Courtney Miller, complains about how people in society act. In order to prepare for her role, Miller practiced hunching over and taking smaller steps. Miller liked the "overall message" the play had of bringing different generations together.

While talking to his mother about a memory of the past, Pete, portrayed by Senior Daniel Nieman II, is "canoodled" by his assistant dancers, Seniors Holly Floyd and Niki Kraska. "Practices were long," said Floyd, "but (the play) was fun."

Elderly give a grand performance

The 2006 spring play, "He Held Me Grand," examined the history of the Williams family over a period of 100 years.

"It's a very new play. It was first presented in the year 2002. When I first saw it, I thought it was a very acceptable play because it dealt with parents, loved ones and grandparents, and we all have that," said Mrs. Beverly Seaver, Director of the Dramatic Society.

The play was about the elderly, and students had to grasp the concept of getting into older characters to play their roles.

"I played the role of a 93-year old man. The walking and speaking was the most difficult part," said Junior Dwayne Johnson.

Senior Daniel Nieman II, who played the role of a 78-year old man said, "To try to be old and to stay in character was hard."

Some members of the cast said they had no problem, however, relating to their characters.

"I played the part of June, the youngest of three sisters. June was also the wildest of the sisters, and I relate to this part because I'm the wildest in my family," Sophomore Alexandra McLaughlin said.

"I sing and dance in choir, and I had to do the same in the play, so it wasn't hard for me at all," Senior Holly Floyd said.

"I related well to my character because when I was younger, I spent a lot of time with my grandparents, and I still do," said Nieman.

Some of the cast admitted to having problems with their costumes, while some of them thought the costuming helped establish their characters.

"I was an 80-year-old lady," Senior Courtney Miller noted. "I had to wear a wig, and that was one of the hardest parts because it was so uncomfortable." "Costumes help your character. You relate more to your character by wearing costumes," she added.

"For this play, we had a very large cast," Mrs. Seaver said. "The only problem we had was to remind the students that they are not teenagers, that they are old. Otherwise, everything went really well."

In one scene, Junior Sirena Blas and Sophomores Jessica Myren and Ryan Sandefur recite the names of those who served in the war. Next year, these students will be left with the job of filling in the leading positions left by seniors.

Seated in the control booth, Junior Tiffany Begala, a techie, waits for sound cues. Techies in a play are involved in monitoring sound and lighting effects, as well as helping change scenery.

Dedication and unity are two vital components of a team. Whether student athletes are at practice or in competition, working to be the best is always at the top their to-do list. Motivation comes from teammates who support each other throughout the season.

Teamwork is important because a team is only as good as its worst player. Teams work together to make sure everyone realizes his or her own goal. The support that members receive from each other pushes them to work harder and improve.

The pressure to be champions is the driving force that keeps teams motivated. The challenges they face throughout the season bring teammates together and help them perform to the best of their abilities.

"Once a Pirate always a Pirate." Gregg Popovich coined that phrase when he returned to Merrillville wearing his varsity letterman's jacket from his graduation year, 1966. Popovich's jersey, number 21, was retired during a varsity basketball game in December. Popvich now coaches the San Antonito Spurs, a professional basketball team.

As he kicks the ball back into the game, Junior Nome Damjanoski focuses on the next play. A varsity soccer team member since freshman year, Damjanoski said, "I play for the love of the game." Damjanoski also said he hopes to keep improving in order to get the soccer team noticed again.

Setting up for a shot, Junior Jamesha Harris concentrates to make sure she makes the basket. Harris said she plays basketball because it is a way for her to "relieve stress," and because it is something she is really good at. Harris is proud of her team for their record this year, but hopes to make it even better for her next and final season as a senior.

Staring down the opposing offensive line, Seniors Rayshon Richardson and Vance Gidley prepare for the upcoming play. The defense talks to each other and tries to decipher the offensive scheme. "Each time on the line is a different experience; and towards the end of the season it's more of an adrenaline rush," said Richardson.

Rushing down the field, Senior James Aldridge holds the ball high and tight to his chest. He relied heavily on his offensive line to give him a clear path to the end zone. "I just watch the players so I can react and get as far as possible," said Aldridge. He rushed a total of 1,433 yards this season. Aldridge has been accepted at the University of Notre Dame, where he plans on playing running back. He was the first football player in Notre Dame's history to enroll early.

FINISHING 'UNFINISHED BUSINESS'

The "Unfinished Business" from last year came closer to being finished with the Football Team winning sectional and regional titles.

Beating Crown Point for the sectional title was not only one of the biggest games in region history, but it was also the highlight for many people this year, including Seniors Beau McClendon and Vance Gidley. They said that they were pumped up because of the huge crowd, which exceeded 8000 fans, and the electrifying feeling in the air.

Beating Crown Point, the number two-ranked team in the state, was not enough for the Football Team. They pushed through and defeated Penn, the number four-ranked team in the state, in the Class 5A Regional 1 Championship, thanks to a stellar performance by the defense.

"Our defense really stepped up and won that game for us. We have the best defense in the state," said Senior Michael Padgett.

Padgett said the team set a goal at the beginning of the season to leave a legacy. This was accomplished. "We were one of the best teams in Merrillville history and people will still be talking about us in 20 years," said Senior Deji McCarthy.

McClendon said that the big family atmosphere was the key to their success because most of the seniors looked at the other guys as brothers rather than teammates.

Gidley said they did everything from singing together to going to each others' houses to watch Prep Football Report, a ritual the night before every game.

"There's nothing like going out there with ten of your best friends and completely dominating the other team. I love those guys," said McCarthy.

"I just wish we could have gone all the way. But you can't look back wanting to change things. You should just be happy we all got to play together," said Gidley.

"It's never how you start. It's how you finish," said Coach Jeff Yelton.

As he searches for an open receiver, Senior Evan Parker picks apart the defense. "I just focus on what I have to do at that time," said Parker. As the quarterback for the Pirates, Parker threw a total of 1,629 yards and 16 touchdowns. He ran a total of 570 yards for 10 touchdowns this season.

With his eyes on the end zone, Senior Anthony Curry dodges past Albert Evans of Portage. Curry had 28 receptions for 570 yards this season. "I want to do whatever it takes to win," said Curry. Curry said his focus stays on catching the ball, first and foremost. The end zone is all he can see after that.

Batting down a pass, Senior Dexter Larimore leaps over Tim Vega of East Chicago. Larimore played both defense and offense throughout the season. "Dexter was a key player in stuffing the offensive line and freeing up our linebackers to make plays," said Senior Michael Padgett. Larimore will play for Ohio State.

While Kacher enjoys hitting more than blocking, Kelly likes blocking more. "I love blocking," Kelly said, "I like seeing the other girls' faces after I block them."

As she dives onto the floor, Junior Lauren Hallenbeck gets the ball up. During the past season, Hallenbeck tied the school record with 2004 Graduate Tianna Coleman for the most digs in a single game. Hallenbeck also hit during the season and enjoyed the front row more than the back row because there was "more excitement in the front row."

DIGGING TOWARD IMPROVEMENT

The only word to sum up the 2005 Merrillville Volleyball Team is teamwork.

"Teamwork is how we got every single one of our wins. Everyone had to contribute," said Coach Tania Price.

During the season the girls worked on connecting and coming together as team. The team started during the summer with early morning workouts and open gyms to begin the pre-season. They had a team bonding experience with a trip to a team camp in Grand Valley, a completely new endeavor for the team.

"The day was really long but we had got tons of playing time in and got an early start to the season," said Senior Erica Aloia.

Then the girls participated in Merrillville's own traditional team camp.

The regular season started with try-outs.

"Try-outs were different this year with the girls having to condition outside. With the weather being so hot we had to make sure everyone was hydrated and healthy," said Coach Price.

As the team started to play games, they realized what the biggest obstacle of the season would be: injuries.

"Injuries took a major toll on our team. Almost every player had to sit out at one time or another," said Senior Stephanie Pavlish. "I had to sit out and the hardest part is to watch your teammates be out there and know you cannot be out there with them."

With only two varsity starters not succumbing to injury at one point or another, this made all the girls step up into new roles or positions. Every girl on the varsity roster saw playing time. With a line-up that rotated continuously, the team saw many highs and lows.

"Both Chesterton games stick out in my mind, because both went to five and both were extremely close. I think one of our best games was against second ranked Mishawaka because we really played as a team and gave them some competition," said Coach Price.

The team started post-season with all of their varsity starters.

"Going into sectionals we were really excited and prepared. We knew our goal and knew we had to work hard to reach it," said Aloia.

The team ended the season with a loss in the second round of sectionals. The season did not end up as they hoped, but they all felt it was still a success.

"It is not about the win/loss record but how we all felt. No one wanted it to end. And that made it a successful season, because we all enjoyed it so much," said Coach Price.

With her arms extended, Senior Stephanie Pavlish digs the ball. Pavlish played the libero position this year, which meant she could only play in the back row. This was the first year the IHSAA approved the libero. "It took some time to adjust to the position, but I loved being able to be on the floor for the entire time," Pavlish said.

In an attempt to perfect her technique, Senior Erica Aloia practices a back set before a game. Aloia has been a varsity player for her four years of high school. She was MVP during her junior and senior years and made the All-Conference team and Academic All-State team during her senior year. Despite her individual accomplishments, she knows that "none of this would have happened without my teammates."

As she focuses in on the ball, Senior Callie Lucas hits the ball over the net. Due to the team's multiple injuries, Lucas was forced to play outside hitter this season. Lucas actually viewed herself as more of a back row or defensive player. "I like back row," Lucas said, "It is always over looked, but it is just as important as the other positions."

BOYS' SOCCER TEAM SHOOTS FOR THE GOAL

Preparation for the 2005 boys' soccer season began long before the team's opening match. The team could be found at summer conditionings where they ran and lifted weights to prepare for their season.

Coach Brian Past, who has coached soccer for three years at Benton Central and nine years at Merrillville High School, said that this year's team had high expectations. Their goals were to win sectionals and finish in the top half of the Duneland Athletic Conference.

Senior midfielder Mladen Suleski stated that another one of the team's goals was to "play hard, but play fair."

Senior all-around player Brian Albee commented on the season. "We expected a lot coming into the season with the amount of talent we had," Albee said.

Coach Past said that the team faced a tough schedule this year, as eight of the teams they played were ranked in the top 20. The team finished third, with a record of 5-2 in the DAC. Coach Past believes that the match that the team played the best at this year was the 1-0 defeat over Portage that secured the team's third place finish in the DAC.

Senior captain Bryan Ruder said he thought this game showed the team's spirit.

"The team fought the whole game. If we would have lost, we would have placed lower in the DAC. Once we got the first goal, we fought all of the second half to keep it," he said.

One of the positives of the season to Ruder was the extreme closeness of the team.

"We were a big family," Ruder said.

The team ended up finishing their season in the first round of sectionals with a 1-0 loss to Lake Central.

"With all the talent on the team, we should have gone farther," Suleski said.

Despite the team's outcome in sectionals, Coach Past said, "I was really proud of the way the guys played."

Dribbling the ball down the field, Sophomore Daniel Prentoski concentrates on nothing but the ball. Prentoski, the Pirates' midfielder, said that working as a team helped the successful season. "If we don't play as a team, we aren't going to win," he said.

As the Pirates' stopper and sweeper, Senior Bryan Ruder makes a goal kick across the field against Chesterton. Ruder said the hardest part of his position is "marking the other team's top forward and being able to balance offense and defense." The Pirates defeated Chesterton 4-2.

As he catches the ball, the Pirates' goalie, Junior Jeff Jelenik, stops the opponents from scoring. "I don't know how to play any other position. I have been playing goalie all my life," said Jelenik. He was named All-District goalie, as well as the All-State Honorable Mention for the 2005 season.

GIRLS' SOCCER TEAM GOIN' FOR THE GOAL

With a total of 25 teammates, the girls' Soccer Team overcame many obstacles placed against them. The girls prepared throughout the summer with daily conditioning and team practices. Sophomore Katelynn Kora said that Coach Jeff Fairbairn worked the girls "hard in an attempt at a victorious season."

Junior Kacey Loudermilk said, "I was so proud to see all the girls step up and come to all of our practices."

This year was the first in the past ten years that one captain held the responsibility of leading the team. In previous years, two to four upperclassmen held the captain's position. Senior Sarah Vaughn, as captain this year, led the team to a "long-awaited" victory at the South Bend Riley Tournament.

"It has been a long time since we could walk away from that tournament with a trophy in our hands. We finally felt like a team," said Loudermilk.

As the season progressed, the girls said they continued "to bond more like sisters."

With a record of 5 and 11, sectionals quickly approached. The girls prepared six days a week in an attempt to overcome their sectional match, Hobart.

Eight girls stepped up and joined the varsity roster for the sectional game. The girls included: Freshman Michelle Warshall; Sophomores Despina Lozevski, Kendall Sharp, Katie Harold, Kaitlynn Kora and Debbie Harstad; Junior Andrea Warmon; and Senior Brittany Perry.

"The girls could have used a little more preparation and a lot more competitiveness to prevail over Hobart in sectionals," said Loudermilk.

With a score of 3-0, the Pirates lost their sectional game against Hobart, and their season came to an end.

Loudermilk was this year's top scorer with a total of 12 goals over a period of 17 games. Senior Alison Conquest was right behind her with four goals and five assists. Conquest, with 16 lifetime goals, has the leading record of all the seniors.

To keep the girls in touch with the soccer field during the off-season, they continue to run and work out on a regular basis.

"With the season over, we maintain a soccer mentality by training for the upcoming season. We want this one to be even more successful than the last," said Kora.

As players watch, Senior Sarah Vaughn (9) prepares to steal the ball from the opposing team, Andean High School. Vaughn enjoyed playing the position of left defense. "I don't mind playing the position that I play as long as I don't get someone who runs a lot," said Vaughn.

With her feet leaving the ground, Senior Erica Richmond attempts to pick up the ball. After playing soccer for three years, Richmond said, "It has been a lot of hard work, and this year the team worked together and did a lot of bonding which helped them out so much this year."

After kicking the ball, Senior Alison Conquest keeps an eye on her opponent. Conquest had experienced playing many positions on the field. Conquest said, "I enjoy the many positions that I play, and I play anywhere on the field I can play, except for goalie."

Setting the pace for the rest of the runners, team leader Senior Justin Floyd works his way toward the state competition. "I ate healthy and worked hard every day to achieve my goals," Floyd said. He ran more than 70 miles per week to prepare himself for his races. All his effort paid off when Floyd placed 29th in the State Meet in Terre Haute.

Striding along the course, Senior Raymond Duttweiler strives to better his times. "When I run, all I think about is passing people and making sure I have good form," Duttweiler said. During the season, he carried around a battery, which he believed brought him good luck.

TEAM MAKES IT TO TWO STATES IN ONE SEASON

The Boys' Cross Country Team finished their season with an eighth place finish at semi-state and advanced an individual to state, Senior Justin Floyd.

For the past three years, advancement to semi-state or state has been the expectation of the team and they have succeeded at both goals this year.

Running between 25 and 70 miles a week, the team worked together to achieve their team and individual goals. Seniors Raymond Duttweiler, Kevin Wilson and Justin Floyd became leaders for their team.

"If the team didn't do well as a whole at a meet, I would tell everyone that we needed to step it up and I would also bring up our goals to motivate us," said Duttweiler.

For Wilson, his goals were to become one of the top runners of the team and to have a time close to 17 minutes. He achieved his goal with his best time being 17:21.

"I ran a lot of miles over the summer. I ran over 70 miles a week for several weeks," said Wilson.

As for Floyd, his main goal this year was to advance to state. He accomplished this and became the 29th runner in the state. As one of the leaders of the team, Floyd said he led the team by example.

One of Coach Mike Hoffman's season goals was for each runner to improve his time. Coach Hoffman said he was pleased with this year's improvements.

"More runners were under 17 or 18 minutes compared to last year," said Coach Hoffman.

As a team with only 11 runners, they were a small group; however, team members said they shared a strong bond.

"We are like a small family," said Wilson.

Sprinting away from the starting line, the Pirates' Cross Country Team begins one of its grueling 5K races. "We are a small group, but a close group," said Senior Kevin Wilson. The Pirates used that team spirit and unity to propel themselves all the way to semi-state where they placed eighth.

Running with determination, Senior Kevin Wilson speeds along the course to keep ahead of the competition. "I put in a lot of miles in the summer to become one of the top runners on the team," said Wilson. Although not the fastest, Wilson had become one of the many leaders on the team.

With a last burst of energy, Junior Matt Bane crosses the finish line. Bane had to earn his spot on the varsity team through many hours of hard work. "I stepped up when the team needed me," Bane said. Since he started running his sophomore year, he has worked to improve his form and lower his times.

Three-year Captain Senior Raquel Guerrero runs yet another race. Guerrero has been in cross country since fourth grade. She did not run a lot this season due to a car accident. Guerrero said, "When I could run, it wasn't great." She said the team is stronger this year and is "surprised (the team) didn't make it out of sectionals." As for sectionals next year, she said the girls need to "bring it that day."

Fighting through every step of the race, Junior Maritsa Escalante has her mind set to get her best time. One highlight of the season Escalante remembered is the "DAC meet because everyone on the team got their best times," she said. Escalante has been in cross country since she was in sixth grade and she also participates in swimming and track.

GIRLS' CROSS COUNTRY RUNNIN' STRONG

The girls' Cross Country Team started vigorous conditioning in mid-June in the summer heat and the gruesome practices did not end until October. The girls said the practices consisted of long runs of 4 to 6 miles and hard sprints on the track.

Despite the hot and humid weather, the girls had to pull through it and take what they were given. However, some girls felt they performed better when it was cooler outside.

"I like running more in the morning, when it is cooler outside as opposed to the afternoon. I run a lot better in the morning," said Sophomore Tiarra Wright.

Senior Raquel Guerrero explained the differences between cross-country and other sports.

"When we get in trouble its not like we have to run because we do that anyways. Our coach makes us do pushups. Cross country also required a lot of endurance," she said.

During the season the team had seven losses and one win. To some girls, this record came as a shock. They believed there were some meets they should have won.

During the DAC conference invite, most girls had their personal best times. Freshman Kate Tarr was one of those girls to get a best time at the DAC invite. She placed 16th at sectionals.

Throughout the season, "The team really stuck together and showed how badly we wanted to win," said Sophomore Jessica Boursier.

Sophomore Chantrice Cade also agreed with Boursier, and said everyone did exceptionally well that day. However, despite the many personal bests, the team's season came to an end at sectionals.

"I expected us to go further than we did. Last year we went to regionals," said Junior Arielle Anderson.

Overall, the girls said it was a good season because they grew closer as friends and as a team. They said they all have plans of joining the Cross Country next year, and making it that much better.

Raquel Guerrero, who has been captain for the past three years, left the Cross Country Team with a tip of advice.

She said, "Just keep sticking together as one and the team will do just fine."

Stretching before a meet, the girls' Cross Country Team prepares for their race. During practice, the girls ran anywhere from a half hour to an hour and a half straight. "(Practice) is never easy. It takes endurance," said Sophomore Chantrice Cade. Kate Tarr, the only freshman, said practice was "hard because of the older girls" she ran with.

With their minds set on their best times, the team starts the race. This season did not go how Sophomore Jessica Boursier wanted. "There were a couple meets I expected us to win," she said. Sophomore Brianna Urserly was shocked the team did not advance out of sectionals. Tiarra Wright, a sophomore, said next year she wants "to make it out of sectionals into regionals and move forward."

Rarely thinking of anything other than the finish line, Junior Arielle Anderson sprints towards her goal. She said this year Crown Point was the team with the most competition. "We could have beat them," she said.

Returning a serve, Senior Drake Branda hits the ball. Branda has been playing number one singles for the past two years at the varsity level. "People are going to need to step up," said Branda of the team for their success in the next season. Branda remained undecided whether he will play college tennis next year, but he is sure he will continue to play for fun.

BOYS' TENNIS TEAM SERVING UP TO REGIONALS

With day and night camps, summer practices and off-season play, the boys' Tennis Team spent a great deal of time preparing for their upcoming season.

Although their regular season was not as successful as they would have liked, the boys had a great deal of success. In the post-season, the team swept through sectionals with two 5-0 victories, and then advanced to the last round of regional competition.

In addition to the team's success, Senior Drake Branda made first team All-District and All-Conference. The number one doubles team of Senior Jared Perkins and Junior Stoten Stofko also accomplished that feat and in addition made honorable mention All-State.

Stofko said, "Even though my partner was gone for a couple matches and I had to play with other kids, I tried my best to adapt to their play, but when me and him (Perkins) played together we made up for each other's faults or weaknesses and played well."

"I personally thought my season was successful, but not nearly what I hoped for. All in all, it was a fun senior season," said Branda.

The team this year had the addition of a foreign exchange student, Senior Christian Mathys, and several freshmen players. Coach Dave Zimmerman spent a lot of time juggling the lineup around to find the best combination.

Coach Zimmerman said that although the team's win-loss record was not as good as it was in previous seasons, the players all meshed together well and practices ran smoothly. The remaining players have strong desires to move further in the post-season by improving their game with tournament play and hard work over the months leading up to their next season.

As he reaches out to hit a volley, Junior Ashish Arshanapalli returns the ball to help his team win the Highland match. Arshanapalli played at number two doubles all season with various partners. "Ups and downs," said Arshanapalli about his season. "It was like a rollercoaster." Arshanapalli said he will work harder this off season than ever before to improve his game for next season.

Serving for an ace, Junior Stoten Stofko played at number one doubles with partner Senior Jared Perkins "We all had all the fundamentals pretty much down," says Junior Stoten Stofko about his fellow teammates. Stofko and Perkins attribute their success to their teamwork.

Concentration fills Sophomore Wyatt Perkins, as he returns the volley hit by his opponent. In only his second year of varsity tennis, Perkins improved dramatically, said his coaches who awarded him with the Most Improved award at the end of the season. Perkins planned on conditioning in the post-season in hopes of playing number one singles next fall.

GIRLS' GOLF WORKS ON COURSE OF IMPROVEMENT

With the loss of several key 2005 graduates such as Megan Frasca and Katie Coleman, the 2005 girls' Golf Team needed to make up for their losses this season.

The team began conditioning for their upcoming season during the summer. Practices began Monday through Friday at 6:30 a.m.

When school resumed, practices were held a couple hours after school, where the girls would work on improving their driving and putting.

The girls achieved Coach Richard Ohlenkamp's goals of improving their averages and overall golfing experiences.

"We made a lot of improvements," said Coach Ohlenkamp.

Senior Angela East also noticed improvements in the team throughout the season. "Well, the girls we had in the beginning were not quite as good as they could have been, but by the end of the year we all improved," she said.

Although they made improvements, the team faced difficulties this year. They had to find a suitable golf course to play at and make the golf schedule fit around the girls. Nonetheless, the girls were kept busy by a full schedule of matches.

Next year, the team must work on recruiting new members to fill in the spots of the three graduating seniors.

Sophomore Jessica Myren expressed her hopes and plans for next season with the loss of the team's seniors. "Hopefully, we'll focus on trying to improve, and we're trying to get more people. We plan on training during the winter," she said.

Still, golf has left good memories for its members who are graduating.

East said that she would miss "the team and just the fun we had."

Senior Ashley Washburn said, "It has been a good experience and I have learned a lot."

With her head down, Senior Elizabeth Lashenik concentrates on how she strikes the ball down the fairway. Lashenik played varsity for three years.

As her tee shot flies down the fairway, Senior Angela East watches the ball to see where it lands. "Seeing if the ball is close to the hole once it lands is the best part of a hit."

Standing on the tee can make some golfers nervous, but not Senior Ashley Washburn. Washburn said she is always prepared before she puts the ball. She was also one of the girls from last season returning to varsity.

Completing a double flip for one of his main dives, Sophomore Shaquille Young gets ready to hit the water. Young started as a swimmer in the early season, but a heart problem caused him to switch to diving. "My favorite part of each meet is standing on the diving board in dead silence knowing that all eyes are on me," Young said.

Getting set to take a dive, Senior Dwight Harding focuses on the "moment at hand." Harding began diving his senior year. "Since I hadn't played any other sports in high school, I wanted to my senior year," said Harding. Harding thought that diving would be easy but soon realized diving was difficult.

NEW COACH BRINGS NEW IMPROVEMENTS

With a new coach and a heavy practice schedule, the Boys' Swimming Team prepared early this year for their season.

"He works us hard individually and as a team," said Senior Scott Stephen regarding the new coach, Mr. Matt Pavlovich.

Coach Pavlovich graduated from Merrillville and was involved in "MAC" since he was six years of age. Pavlovich received a minor in aquatics from Ball State, which allowed him to become the high school coach. He used his swimming knowledge as a college graduate and a pirate alumnus to aid in his coaching techniques.

"I was really excited to improve the swimming program here at Merrillville," said Pavlovich.

A diet regime, along with intense pre-conditioning and practices, made sure that the team would be physically fit for the tough season. As part of their diet plan, they were encouraged to monitor what they ate. This included staying away from pop and junk food. The team was also encouraged to work out during their off time to improve their strength and endurance.

"We had two a days over our breaks off of school. It was tiring but we all knew we had to pull through to do well during the season," said Stephen.

The swim team pulled through this season with only two seniors on the team. Donnie Whittemore and Stephen led the team with their experience from their previous swimming seasons.

"As a captain, Scott would have to be an important asset on our team this season," said Junior Stoten Stofko.

The team placed seventh out of twelfth at sectionals. Stofko and Stephen placed in the top six individually in their events. With teamwork, the team tripled their overall score from the past two years alone. The team viewed this as a great accomplishment considering they were not very large in size and were working with a new coach.

As he darts into a freestyle stroke, Junior Stoten Stofko tries to take a win home for his team. Stofko has been swimming for four years, has been on the swim team for three years and has been a captain for one year. "I look forward to returning next year because I'll be one of the oldest on the team," said Stofko.

As the meet begins, Senior Scott Stephen performs the breaststroke motion. He has been a captain for three years. Stephen feels that the team has competed well this season but could have done better. "Our team could encourage each other during practice and at the meets," said Stephen.

Competing against others with the butterfly stroke, Senior and Co-Captain Donnie Whittemore tries to stay focused. "Being focused is one of the most important challenges in swimming. You have to stay focused at all times so that you can do your best," said Whittemore.

To position herself for her dive, Sophomore Vanessa Alexander jumps on the diving board and gains balance. Diving since the fourth grade, Alexander knows the pressure involved in competitive diving. In order to relieve her stress before a meet she said, "I listen to music to calm down and get focused."

Focusing on completing her dive, Sophomore Theresa Rizo looks toward the water to enter with poise. Although injured during the season, Rizo competed in the Duneland Athletic Conference meet. Rizo said, "I only had two practices but I still made it to third place in the DAC meet. That was my best moment."

NEW COACH MAKES TEAM MORE 'DEDICATED'

With a new coaching staff in both swimming and diving, the girls' Swim Team had to adjust to new practices. This was Coach Matt Pavlovich's first year as a coach for Merrillville High School; however, Merrillville High School was not new to him. Coach Pavlovich had been part of Merrillville High School's Swim Team while he was a student at MHS. The girls on the Swim Team agreed that Coach Pavlovich helped improve this season from previous seasons.

Sophomore Karen Balko said that Coach Pavlovich "made more people dedicated and made more people come out for the team."

The girls' practices were slightly different from previous seasons. Attending morning practices was a requirement. Many girls on the team agreed that this contributed to the girl's overall improvement. This season the girls had a record of seven wins and eight losses.

Sophomore Sarah Yacko said, "The team improved immensely in a short period of time."

Beating the Munster Junior Varsity Swim Team was one of many highlights of the girls' swimming season.

Kendall Sharp, a sophomore, said that Munster has always been known as having an outstanding Swim Team, both at Junior Varsity and Varsity levels. To the girls on the Swim Team, it was a huge accomplishment.

To help prepare themselves before their meets, many of the girls would listen to music.

Senior Ashley Washburn, a swimmer, said, "I listen to music to help calm me down."

Swim captains, Sharp, Yacko and Junior Andrea Paulnitz, helped get the team pumped up before a meet by holding pep meetings, where the girls would cheer, and the captains would give short speeches to motivate the team.

Some of Coach Pavlovich's goals at the beginning of the season were to improve as a whole. He also wanted individuals to advance to state this year. Not only did the girls improve this season, but also, several girls made it to State this year. Yacko, Balko, Sophomore Katie Balko and Junior Angela Cast all advanced to the state finals.

The girls were ranked 20th going in and ended up placing 15th. The girls set a new record while competing in the 400 Freestyle Relay at sectionals and later reset the record at state, dropping two seconds from their final time. What made Coach Pavlovich most proud of the girls, was the fact that three sophomores and one junior placed so well against seniors and juniors at the state level.

"It was a really big accomplishment," Coach Pavlovich said.

Coach Pavlovich said the team consisted of many freshman and sophomores, and the girls' Swim Team will improve even more each season.

Tightly pulling her arm to complete a stroke, Sophomore Karen Balko competes in the 200 yard individual medley. Balko has been swimming for nine years and said that a daily practice involved "stretching, kick sets, swim sets and sprints" in order to prepare the team for meets.

Quickly taking a breath, Junior Andrea Paulnitz focuses on completing her event. Swimming since age nine, Paulnitz realized that swimming is both an individual and team sport. She said, "As an individual, I have my own goals for sectionals, but as a team, we are all working to get our teammates to state."

As she races to the finish, Sophomore Katie Balko extends her arms for her final butterfly stroke. Balko said she felt that the team had become more focused this year probably due to the new coach. Balko said, "Coach Pavlovich helped us and made us more dedicated to the sport."

Balancing on the beam, Senior Denise Coleman prepares to perform her next move. After competing in gymnastics for five years, she described her last season as "a good season overall." Coleman added, "Everybody hit it on different days, so it went up and down."

On the floor, Sophomore Courtney Deming completes a back handspring. Deming competed in sectionals in her favorite event, bars. However, competing was not her favorite experience, which was watching everybody else. "It shows how much you can contribute and how easily you can get your spot taken," Deming said.

BALANCE, COORDINATION AND PRECISION

Gymnastics is not just about flexibility. Gymnastics is a sport that involves talent, balance and perseverance. These qualities are put to the test in the four events in gymnastics: vault, bars, beam and floor.

This year, the Gymnastics Team had ten team members. Their goal was to increase the difficulty level of all routines and also to increase the team score so they could advance to regionals as a team unit.

"Although we managed to upgrade our routines and increase our scoring potential, we came short of advancing as a team. Our team members also finished the season reaching 64 personal goals," said Coach Diane Roberts.

"We are very pleased with this accomplishment," Coach Roberts added.

Most of the girls on the Gymnastics Team, such as Senior Denise Coleman, have practiced and performed since they were young.

"As a kid, I've always watched it on the Olympics. When I moved out here and found out that there was a Gymnastics Team, I decided to try out," said Coleman.

To the girls, the team was not just a team, but also a family.

"We are like family, but more like sisters," said Junior Maunya Jacobs.

Jacobs, this year's M.V.P. and top scorer, made a name for herself in Northwest Indiana. After earning first place all-around in regionals, Jacobs went on to place fifth in bars at the state competition.

"I feel good because I was the only girl to place," Jacobs said. "It's an honor to be the only person to represent Northern Indiana."

The team already has plans and goals for the upcoming season.

"Our plans for next season are the same as they are every season," said Coach Roberts. "To work hard in the off-season and in-season to do what's necessary to advance our team to the state tournament."

Focusing on doing a front support, Sophomore Daniela Rios competes on the uneven bars. Rios was satisfied with the season overall, but one of the best memories was the friendships with the other girls. "We are a very close team, and we are all best friends," Rios said.

With her eyes closed, Junior Maunya Jacobs concentrates on doing the right trick on the beam. Jacobs said she worked hard in practice, especially towards her individual state competition. "I want to do gymnastics all the way through college and maybe even in the Olympics," Jacobs said.

As she completes a handspring, Sophomore Samone Kinsey performs on her favorite event, the vault. When competing, Kinsey said that she tried to think positive and focus on her mental choreography. "Mental choreography is writing down what we are going to do," Kinsey explained.

"I like performing, pleasing the crowd and giving it my all," said Senior Tiffany Gordon, who has been dancing since the second grade. Gordon said dancing "is an art and we put a lot of hard work into technique."

"I don't think when I dance. I just have fun. It's a stress reliever," said Senior Jarryn Robinson about dancing. Robinson said next year's team should "enjoy themselves and prepare to work very hard."

BEST FOOT FORWARD

For some, dancing for the poms team isn't just a sport, it is a way of life.

"I love dancing. All the girls love dancing. You can just see it in their expressions when they dance, the expression that they're so happy they just can't live with out it," said Sophomore Lisa Sternberg.

"In other sports, having team unity and being unified is important, but with poms, it is crucial that everyone is the same. If this does not happen, then it throws the whole performance off," said Sternberg.

The poms team worked together to make sure everyone looks like one unit. In order to do this the girls did activities to help bring them together. Freshman Loriele Johnson said that these activities helped a lot and that the girls were very unified as a team.

Senior Kayla Turner thinks otherwise. "If I could have changed one thing, it would have been the team unity. We simply needed more of it."

The squad's season lasted for both fall and winter sports. However, the winter season is more hectic because the team has both basketball games and competition. They compete through IHSOTA (Indiana High School Dance Team Association) against other school's dance teams on the weekend, while trying to manage doing basketball games on Friday nights and sometimes during the week.

Junior Carla Emmett, who dances for two different dance teams, including Merrillville's pom team, had to find a balance between the two.

"It got really hard at times. We would have practice every day for two to four hours a day, and then I would have to go practice with my other team."

Along with the craziness, Emmett also said that a huge obstacle they had to overcome was the fact that they lost some team members throughout the season. Even with all the problems in changing routines at last minute and girls leaving, the team still managed to come out in fifth place for their hip hop routine and sixth place in their pom routine at state this year.

Turner had one tip for the upcoming teams in future years. "Respect everyone on your team, try your hardest and do your best."

Smiling for the crown, Seniors Kayla Turner and Xiomara Vega wave their pom poms during a basketball game. "Don't mess up. Keep counting. Smile. Have fun," These are the kinds of things Turner said runs through her mind while performing.

Five-year dancer Senior Tiffany Taylor performs at halftime during a basketball game. Taylor said one highlight of the season was "when we got first for hip-hop." Taylor advises next year's team to "take practice seriously and respect your coach and captains."

"Camp was really fun because we all got really close there," said Junior Yvette Guzman, who has been dancing for four years. Guzman said, "You feel the moves you're doing, and you don't see anybody else. You just dance."

Supporting the Pirates, Sophomores Mallory Jones and Katherine Vechey cheer along with the crowd. "Without cheerleaders, I think the team would do a lot worse. Our job is to get the crowd pumped, and I think we do a good job at that," said Jones.

As the mascot, Junior Brian Pucher scopes out the game. This was Pucher's first year as the school mascot. "I thought being a mascot would show my school spirit a lot more than just going to games," said Pucher. Pucher, as well as other students, competed to become this year's mascot. Students voted to determine the new mascot.

'WE'VE GOT SPIRIT'

With a total of 17 girls and 2 boys, the members of the Varsity Cheerleading Squad walked away from their summer 2005 camp with their arms full of awards.

This year's captain, Senior Cambria Hollingsworth, was chosen for the leadership award out of all the captains competing. The team also had six members chosen to be on the All American National Cheerleading Association (NCA) cheer team. Of the six elected teammates, Senior Kamai Westbrook was chosen to participate on the NCA staff for upcoming years.

In addition to individual awards, the team walked away with the "Top Team" award as well as "Champion Chant."

"I was very proud of this year's members, and they worked very hard to earn the respect they did," said Coach Lori Govert.

As the summer came to an end, the girls and boys prepared for the football season. Because of the football team's regional title, the cheerleaders were able to cheer their team along through postseason.

"It was really fun being able to cheer on such a talented team this year. It allowed us teammates to stay close with one another even longer before the basketball season split," said Senior Kristin Brindley.

As the basketball season began, the girls and boys immediately started working on their routines.

"The transition to basketball season is really tough because it takes a lot of time and work from the girls. On the other hand, it is much more fun, and we get to dance a lot more," said Brindley.

As basketball season ended, the girls were hit with the end of a "successful" season.

"This year was a lot of fun, yet we got a lot done as well," said Junior Melissa Darang. "Without the seniors help and dedication to the squad, this season would not have gone anywhere."

With their arms in the air, Seniors Kristin Brindley, Callie Lucas and Ashley Thomas chant to pump up the crowd. The cheerleaders had a large team this year. "I like having a lot more girls on the team because you get to do a lot more cool stunts and stuff," said Senior Ashley Thomas.

Showing off their smiles, Sophomore Tracy Lucas and Senior Kristin Brindley stand high above the rest. During the season, the cheerleaders do a series of chants, stunts and lifts. "I enjoy flying (being in the air on top of stunts) because it is a rush. Being higher than everyone else is pretty cool," said Brindley.

As she comes down from a lift, Senior Kamai Westbrook has her teammates to catch her. Westbrook explained that flying can be dangerous. "If it wasn't for the girls catching me, I would fall on the ground every time," said Westbrook.

In midair, Senior Darryl Evans pushes his way towards the basket as Crown Point's Kyle Hanaway and Alecks Alavanja look for the block. In response to being named Co-DAC Champions, Evans said, "It felt real good because the papers and everyone else doubted us. No one thought we could beat Valpo but we proved them wrong."

Making his move through defenders, Junior Andrew Anderson looks for the hoop. Anderson said one of the key factors to the 2005-2006 squad's success was team chemistry. "At the beginning it was a little shaky, but as it went on everything clicked, and at one point we were on a 12 game winning streak," said Anderson.

EXCEEDING EXPECTATIONS

From an exciting Homecoming game win against one of the top teams in the state, to a co-conference championship, the Boys' Basketball Team did more than what they expected. Their goal at the beginning of the season was surpassed by the end of the season.

"Our goal at the beginning was to just be competitive and to play hard. My personal goal was to improve my game," Senior Darrel Evans said.

The Pirates ended the season with a 17-4 record. Evans said the best part of the season was playing with his teammates and beating Valparaiso. The Pirates won the biggest game of the season when they faced the conference favorite, Valparaiso.

"We weren't happy about how we did the first time we played Valpo. Our goal for the homecoming game was to play hard and keep composure from the beginning of the game till the end of the game," Senior and small forward, James Rowe said.

The team said they prepared for the game by doing everything from praying to listening to music.

"Before the game, I listen to music on my IPOD and try to visualize the game," Junior Drew Dawson said.

"While I dress before a game, I read quotes and scriptures that I have taped up in my locker that help me get focused," said Rowe.

Overall, the team members agreed that the season went better than expected. "I wasn't very satisfied with the sectional game, but the season as a whole was awesome," said Dawson.

"The season went much better than expected," Rowe said.

"The season was incredible," said Senior Greg Hill.

Evans said that he could not have wished for a better senior season or a more fun season.

In the tip-off against Portage's A.J. Repay, Freshman Ryan Smith reaches for the ball in hopes of getting possession. Being the only freshman on the Varsity squad, Smith said he felt little pressure on being the least experienced player on the team. "They were all older than me, but we were a family and got along well," said Smith.

As he dribbles past a Portage defender, Senior James Rowe looks down the court hoping for two points out of a fast break. Playing Shooting Guard this season, Rowe said the game that highlighted his season was the East Chicago game. "That's when we played well and played Merrillville basketball the way we know we can," said Rowe.

With Andrean defenders Jesse Repay and David Boarden on both sides, Senior Gregory Hill drives down the lane. Hill has been playing basketball since the age of four and says the team's toughest opponents were themselves. "We had the potential to beat any team out there. If a team beat us it was because we didn't perform our best," said Hill.

Aiming to make the three-point basket, Junior Jamesha Harris plays in the sectional game against Valparaiso. Playing both point guard and shooting guard, Harris said she prepared for this season by conditioning during the off-season. "On off-season, we worked a lot," she said. "We played every game like it was the last."

After the first half in the game against Michigan City, Coach Amy Govert huddles with the girls to give them some advice during a timeout. Coach Govert said, "This season was a great season because we quite possibly had the most wins in the school's history."

POUNDING THE COURT

Entering the 2005-2006 season, the girls' Basketball Team had high hopes and expectations. They were able to achieve these expectations while facing a few changes.

The team was in for a change in coaching style with first-year head coach Amy Govert. Coach Govert enjoyed her first experience in coaching the team.

"I loved it, and I was able to have a lot of support from the Athletic Department," said Coach Govert.

Also new to the team this year was transfer, Senior Sharon Houston. Due to transfer rules, Houston could not play until the team was seven games into the season. Coach Govert said Houston "opened our port and added a lot to our offense."

"At first I didn't know what to do, but after I got to know everyone on the team, it got better," said Houston.

Also adding to the team were returning players Sophomore Britney Cruse and Senior Brittney Moore. Govert believed both players were very strong in the Duneland Athletic Conference. Coach Govert said every player was a vital component to making this year's team as strong as possible.

Adding to the strength of the team was the effort put in by the players during practices. Practices began in October, everyday after school until 5:30 p.m. and lasted until the middle of February. After practices, the girls still made time for bonding by hanging out or going to the movies as a team.

The hard work paid off in the end for the girls' Basketball Team. Their overall record was 19-3, and 13-1 in the conference. They achieved their goal of winning the conference title, but lost sectionals in the second round against Chesterton. Still, they were able to beat rival teams Valparaiso and East Chicago, which was not accomplished by the team the previous year.

With defenders surrounding her, Senior Sharon Houston uses her height to make the shot. Houston, who played forward and center this season after transferring from Gary's Lew Wallace, said that she will play for Old Dominion next year. Houston said, "Our sectional game also was the highlight of our season because we only beat them by a little, no one thought we could do it."

In the game against Crown Point, Senior Angela East tries to drive-in past her opponent. East, who began playing basketball when she was six years old, played shooting guard and small forward. "This season, we performed very well because we actually bonded; we worked as a team," East said.

As she drives the ball down the court, Sophomore and point guard Britney Cruse dribbles the ball around her opponents. "My number one goal for this season was to win the DAC Championship," said the point guard Britney Cruse. The girls' Basketball Team achieved their goal.

Larimore will attend Ohio State where he will play defensive tackle for the football team.

TAKIN' IT TO STATE FOR THE FIRST TIME

The 2006 Wrestling Team set out with high expectations. With many returning starters, and newcomers added into the mix, the team achieved their goals. The team advanced all the way to the state meet, something never accomplished in Merrillville's history.

"It took hard work and dedication from the whole team," said Senior Justin Gust.

With all of this hard work, the team was able to finish the season with a record of 21-1. Some of the team members attributed their winning record to their coach.

"Before a meet, coach [Mr. Maldonado] talks to us and pumps us up," said Senior Colt Contreras.

"I tried to prepare the team as best I could. We practiced hard every day. We even had morning practices twice a week," said Mr. Maldonado.

The coach was not the only motivation for the team. The five captains, Seniors Dexter Larimore, Justin Gust, Cedric Von Rambert Jr., Javier Salas and Colt Contreras were also in charge of preparing the team and keeping them focused. Along with the team's winning season came the success of many individuals.

Many wrestlers started the season with personal goals.

"I wanted to win state," said Larimore.

That is exactly what happened. After going undefeated for the season, Larimore went on to win state in the heavyweight division. He finished the season with a record of 41-0. Salas was also able to win state after a season with only one loss. He finished the season 40-1. Gust, who also advanced to state, was very grateful for the experience.

Gust said, "It was the best feeling in the world to compete at state. All of my hard work had finally paid off."

Staring at his opponent, Kyle Malec, Senior Colt Contreras begins his match against Lake Central. Contreras said his attitude this season was not to win just for himself but for the team, his family and those who supported him. Although he was not undefeated, as he would have hoped, this season's record was an improvement from last season's for Contreras.

As he uses his strength, Senior Justin Gust holds on to his Lake Central opponent, Brock Sanders for a victory. Gust was one of the five captains of the Wrestling Team this year. Gust said the captains really helped the entire team stay focused throughout the season. Making it to state as a team, "Was the best feeling in the world," said Gust.

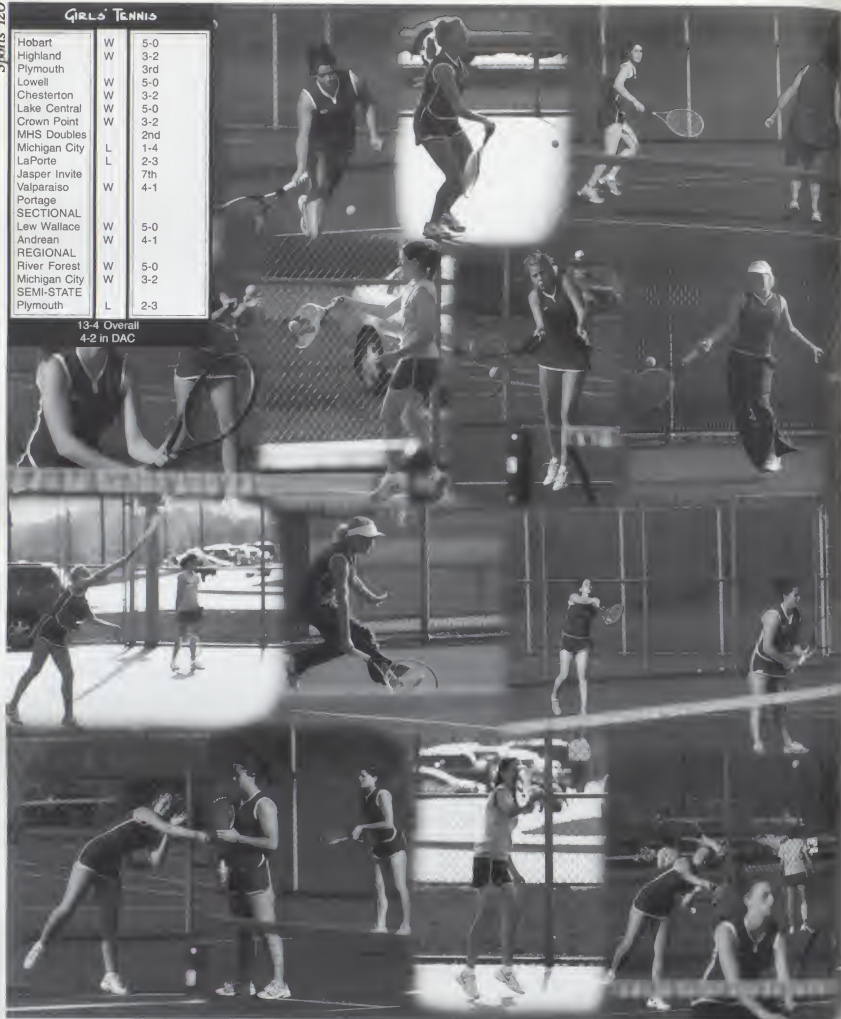

After defeating Lake Central's Rocco Depirro, the referee announces Junior Joseph Wing as the winner. Wing's main goal of this season was to advance to state. He accomplished this and he felt "so honored to just make it." To get as far as he did, Wing said he always listened to what Coach David Maldonado said and worked hard during practices.

About to hit a forehand, Senior Nina Bezvina sets up to return the ball. "I've been playing tennis for a long time, and I work really hard," said Bezvina. Bezvina came to MHS from Russia two years ago and earned the number one spot immediately. She also made 1st Team All-State last year.

Making contact with the ball, Senior Morgan Zellers returns the shot. Zellers played doubles for the team this year. "I've been playing tennis for eight years, and I love it. Tennis is a lot harder than what people think," said Zellers.

WORKING TO ACE THE COMPETITION

The 2006 girls' Tennis Team set their goals high by preparing for the season as early as possible.

With four returning seniors this year, the team started preparing for the season in November. They had nightly practices with members of the boys' team to kick off their season. They would condition three times a week and hit two times a week. Practice continued for two and a half hours every day during the week throughout the season.

Overall, the team thought that all of this practice had been beneficial. The team was state ranked and undefeated for six matches in a row. They also won the sectional and regional and advanced to play in the semi-state competition, where they lost to Plymouth.

Senior Morgan Zellers said the team used all of their strength and competed really well against the tough teams they faced.

"A lot of people think tennis is easy, and all you do is hit a ball over the net. It really takes a lot of physical strength, as well as mental strength. I think that playing doubles is harder because there are more people to worry about, so there is more thinking. When playing singles I am only worried about me and one other person," said Zellers.

Mr. David Zimmerman once again coached this year's team. He said he chose to tinker with the lineup to see who plays the best with what partner or who plays better in different positions. Coach Zimmerman has spent the past 23 years coaching girls' tennis. Twenty of those years have been with Merrillville.

Coach Zimmerman said, "I have been coaching girls for 20 years, but it is not that I prefer them over boys. It is the game of tennis that I prefer, and the girls just happen to give me a mental challenge that I enjoy."

As she watches for the ball, Sophomore Stephanie Donahue prepares. Donahue played singles as well as doubles this year. "Tennis takes a lot of focus and hard work," said Donahue.

Taking the ball in the air, Sophomore Ashley Contreras lines up her shot. Contreras played No. 2 doubles during the postseason. "I like playing doubles. It requires a lot of teamwork," said Contreras.

Before hitting a groundstroke, Freshman Kelsey Barrick runs to meet the ball. Barrick switched between playing No. 3 singles and No. 2 doubles during the season. Barrick said, "Tennis is a great sport but requires a lot of dedication and hard work."

As Senior Justin Belko watches, Senior Jonathan Woodward puts the ball into the hole. The team had three returning seniors this year. "We have been around each other, and we know each other's game," Woodward said.

Looking to see where the ball went, Freshman Matthew Neese stares down the length of the fairway. Neese started varsity as a freshman. He said, "My coach gave me a chance to play varsity, and I had to earn my spot."

BOYS' GOLF TEAM KEEPS IT UNDER PAR

With a new head coach replacing Mr. Richard Ohlenkamp, the boys' Golf Team said they had to make some adjustments for this season. New coach, Mr. Dave Hinkel, came to MHS Golf to a team of three seniors and many underclassmen filling out the varsity spots.

One of the top golfers, Senior Scott Schafer, said that Coach Hinkel is "a good guy. He's confident and he keeps our heads up."

"He's very entertaining and funny. He keeps us loose," said Junior Genesis Stoten.

The guys spent their summers playing in leagues, taking private lessons and practicing their strokes to prepare for the season. Junior Stoten Stofko spent the summer and part of the fall playing in his father's golf league at Sherwood Golf Course in Schererville, Indiana.

"My dad asked me to play with one of the members because he lost his partner and I filled his spot. I saw it as a good opportunity to practice," said Stofko.

When the season started, the boys practiced every day at Summertree Golf Course, doing everything from playing a nine-hole course to chipping and putting. Making strides to playing better golf was important, but the golfers also found keeping each other's heads up a top priority.

Junior Dennis Barsich said that one of the team's biggest strengths was that they could help each other out and help each others' games.

Although the golf season was not as successful as some of the golfers would have hoped, the members still had high goals to keep them motivated throughout match play.

Barsich said that his number one goal was to "shoot lower scores and make Varsity."

With the loss of Seniors Scott Schafer, Jonathan Woodward and Justin Belko, the younger golfers have to look elsewhere for leadership.

Although the younger teammates say that these losses will be tough, they have high hopes to fill their spots and make improvements on their games for the following spring.

Lining up his putt, Junior Genesis Rodrigo looks toward the hole. Regarding putting, Rodrigo said, "It's definitely our strength as a team."

As he follows through with his shot, Senior Jonathan Woodward keeps his eye on the ball. As a captain, Woodward is a leader for the team. Junior Genesis Rodrigo said, "His performance on the course proves his leadership."

After completing his shot, Senior Scott Schafer watches the outcome. Schafer said his goal this year was to "score low and hit straight."

At the peak of his vault, Senior Timothy Sovich clears the bar by over a foot. Sovich improved throughout the season and increased his personal record by a foot and a half. Excited for the postseason Sovich mentioned how "we win sectionals every year, and we dominated the DAC this year. I practice hard every day so I can keep improving my personal record."

Running past his Crown Point competitor, Senior Robert Lewis goes for another win. Lewis is one of the leaders of the track team and works hard every year to improve his time. "Last year, I couldn't run that much because I was injured, but this year, I was healthy throughout this season," Lewis added.

SPRINTING TOWARDS THE TOP

Long distance, short distance, pole-vault, hurdles and relays are just a few of the many events the boys' Track Team competed in. Practices began in February, and the boys would usually lift weights for two days, work on abdominals for one day and spend two days running or working on the individual events.

Coach James Johnston said, "It feels good to see improvements from year to year and to see improvements from the underclassmen."

"Tim Sovich pole vaulted from 13 feet to 14.6 feet. That is just phenomenal!" Coach Johnston said.

This season is the first time that the boys' Track Team has been undefeated in the Duneland Athletic Conference. Coach Johnston said it would have been a big accomplishment if the team won first place at the regional.

To prepare for a meet, many boys partake in many different pre-meet rituals. Junior Andrew Milenkovski said he jogs around the track in the opposite direction for a warm-up at every meet. During warm-ups, Senior Armani Blakely gets in the zone and stays focused.

Some boys on the team decided to participate in track for different reasons. For Blakely, "I have always had a natural love for it."

In the case of Senior Carlton Hoyles, "I don't like any other sport except track, and this school doesn't have a men's gymnas-tics team."

Besides being undefeated in the DAC, the boys' Track Team also won Sectionals. The team lost Regionals by a mere three points, and ended up advancing eight athletes to state. Hoyles, Sophomore Ronneal Williams and Senior Dexter Larimore were able to qualify in two events each. Sovich and Hoyles both brought home eighth place medals. Sovich placed in the pole vault, while Hoyles placed in the 110 hurdles.

With help from Senior Armani Blakely, Senior Cedric Rambert uses a starting block to compete in the 400-meter relay race against Crown Point and Lake Central. Rambert also participated in pole vault and the 200-meter race. "I've had a lot of personal record this year for pole vault. I'm still planning to improve more to make it to State," said Rambert.

Participating in the 110-meter hurdles, Sophomore Ronneal Williams bounds over the first hurdle. "My goal this year is to go to regionals and state. To make it there, I try very hard to improve my time for every hurdle race," Williams said.

Pushing hard and staying ahead of his teammate, Senior Raymond Duttweiler, Senior Kevin Wilson participates in the mile race. "When I run the mile race, all I tell myself is to keep pushing hard to keep my head and mind in the race. If there's any gap, I have to close the gap and keep running hard," Wilson said.

As she finishes the long jump, Senior Abigail Deidigha sinks into the sand. Deidigha said she warms up, stretches and does not let anybody interrupt her before her meets. This season, Deidigha said she saw "a lot of improvement, especially in the freshmen."

Jumping over a hurdle, Freshman Rebecca Neville runs in a meet. Neville has been running track since she was five years old. This year, Neville said she had trouble with her calf. "It changed a little bit of my form. It was real tight and needed some stretching."

KEEPING THEIR EYES ON THE FINISH LINE

The girls' Track Team strived for another successful season again this year and a repeat of the sectional championship while overcoming injuries and working through many obstacles. Coach Joe Atria said that he was happy with the turnout he had this year.

Atria said, "Several excellent athletes returned from last year's team, and several girls with great talent were new to the team this year."

Freshman Rebecca Neville said she had to come through for the Lady Pirates in the 4x100-meter relay, the long-jump, the 100-meter hurdles and 200-meter hurdles.

She said, "It was tough to come up from middle school and straight into varsity positions. The coaches just put me in those positions because they said I was talented, but I had to earn the spot by earning the other girls' respect."

The girls finished the season with a 3-5 record and a sectional championship, while being ranked in the top ten in the region throughout the season.

Sophomore Britney Curry said, "I think we were real strong in some events but not as strong as we would have liked to be all-around."

Senior Tamara Gaddy believed that the team had a really good chance at advancing some of the relay teams, some of the individual sprinters and some of the hurdlers to state. She said, "We have a lot of talent in our 4x100 meter relay teams, and we have some good hurdlers."

The girls were plagued with injuries throughout the season, which impaired their chances for a repeat of the team sectional championship.

Neville said, "Tamara Gaddy and Stephanie Pavlish were injured this year, and the team had several other smaller injuries. We had a lot of shin splints and muscle strains."

Overall, Junior Jemesha Harris summed the season up as successful.

She said, "I really have a lot of confidence that some of the girls will advance to state. If we get some girls that qualify for state, then it was a successful season."

Running during a meet, Junior Arielle Anderson strives for the finish line. Anderson said, "I like our team unity this year." Anderson has been running track since she was six. She said, "If I mess up, I try not to let it get to me."

As Junior Brianna Ursery hands over the baton, Sophomore Jessica Boursier receives it. "We have a young team," said Ursery, "but it's strong." Last season, Ursery endured a leg injury before the outdoor season, and her goal this year was to participate outdoors.

While gripping the pole, Senior Alison Conquest tries to pull herself upward. Conquest received her personal record at the beginning of the season with 9 feet 6 inches in the pole vault. "I always talk to my dad," said Conquest about her preparation. "He fills me with good confidence."

As he looks in the air, Senior Darryl Evans makes his move to get underneath a fly ball. Being one of the region's top players, Evans said that the team was equally strong in batting and fielding. "We can hit the ball when we need to, and we don't allow many runs on defense," said Evans.

Gathered on the field, players look around and share a moment together. Senior Jonathan Kucik said that everyone on the team had good chemistry with one another. "We're like a big family," said Kucik.

STRIKING OUT THE COMPETITION

With nine seniors preparing for their last season together in high school, members of the Baseball Team have a lot to look forward to.

"We have a lot of solid players and the leadership of the seniors helps out a lot," said Varsity Head Coach Zac Wells.

Although the team had a few obstacles to overcome throughout the season, they still managed to keep a high record ending in 23-8 overall. The team suffered two injuries, but both players returned quickly. Senior Jose Ponce injured his hamstring and Junior Alexander Ponce dislocated his finger. Alexander's injury opened up the shortstop position, and Junior Samuel Vesely jumped right in. Vesely said that it was nerve-racking playing on a senior-dominated team, but they "showed me support as the new starting shortstop."

Besides physical challenges, the team had to deal with mental challenges as well.

"Playing 28 games in two months and the difficulty to concentrate during Spring Break, Prom and the nice weather can be hard for a team to focus mentally," said Coach Wells. "But they came through and stuck it out."

Two pitchers led the team in their winning season. Southpaw Senior Adam Farag helped bring the team to several victories. He had a 0.8 earn run average. Also, Junior Matthew Douglas helped the team win several games.

Douglas said he is just trying to concentrate on the season now, but he agreed that next year will be tough with so many seniors leaving.

"Our biggest loss for next year is going to be Boogie because he always comes through in the clutch," said Douglas.

Senior Darryl (Boogie) Evans, Jr. contributed to the team's wins. He had 17 steals, a .317 batting average, and committed no errors in the field.

"Everybody pitches in and does their part in the games that we play," said Evans.

The team said that losing nine seniors will be a difficult obstacle to overcome next year. Coach Wells said he believes that they will still have a strong group of players to contribute to the season next year.

Senior Alfredo Arredondo said, "They'll still be tough," he noted, "because of the successful year we had."

With a look of determination as he goes through his motion, Senior Adam Farag delivers the pitch. As Merrillville's top pitcher, Farag said that a lot of hard work went into off-season preparation. "It was tough because we thought we were going to be short on pitching, so we had to work real hard."

In his batting stance, Senior Jonathan Kucik waits for the pitch. Kucik played left field for the Pirates and said that the team's main goal involved the number of games won. Kucik said, "We wanted to have at least a 25-3 record."

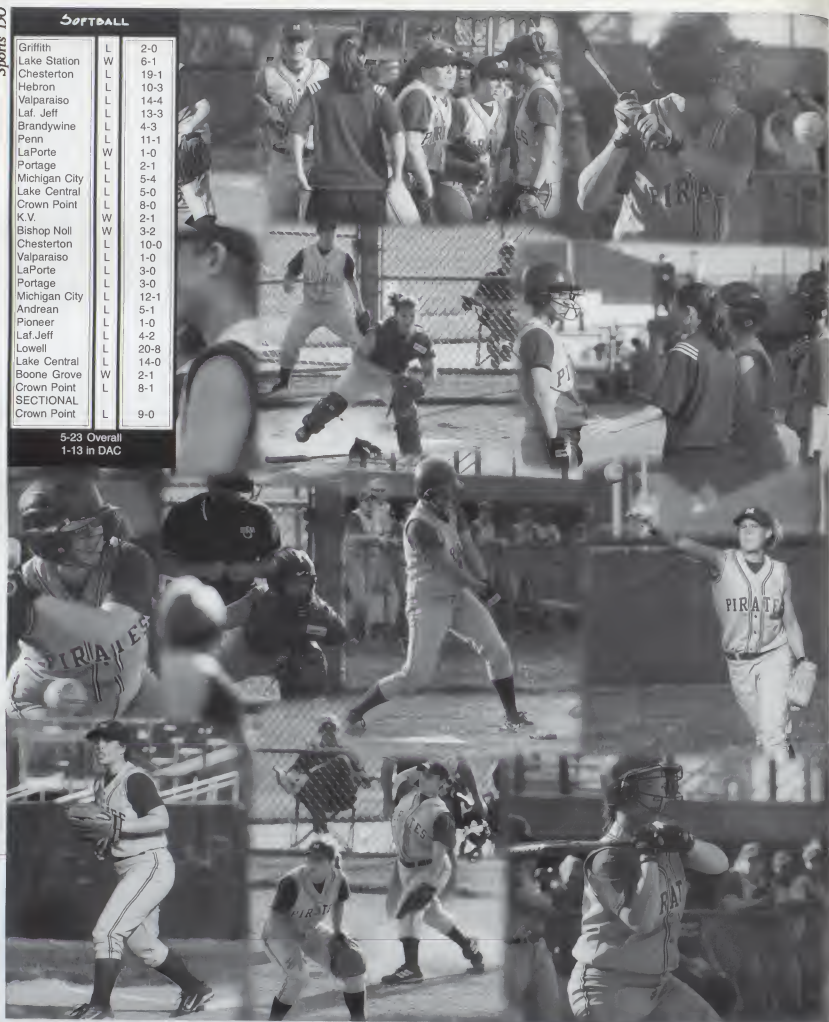

Sliding toward the base, Junior Rahdric Dix attempts to avoid the tag. Dix said he believed that the Baseball Team's biggest strengths were speed and mental approach. "We don't think about our record and just play baseball," said Dix. "We try to have fun."

"If the ball comes to me, to know what to do with it on that situation." Junior Lauren Stacks said that this is what goes through her mind during a game. The softball players said they have a strong bond with one another. "We are all pretty much best friends. We've been playing together since we were ten, and we know each other extremely well," said Stacks.

The lead-off hitter for the Pirates, Senior Heather Zurek puts the ball in play. Coach Amy Govert made the girls write, "Admit your mistakes, learn from you mistakes and don't let it happen again" on a piece of paper to always keep in their pocket while they are playing. "That saying helped me to focus on not making the same mistakes over again," said Zurek.

SWINGING FOR THE FENCES

Having eight out of the nine starters returning from the previous year, the Softball Team and their coach said that they hoped to have the skill and experience to make it very far this year.

"This team can beat anybody when they want to play," said Coach Amy Govert who, along with the players, had very high expectations for the season.

"I expected us to do really well. With all of our returning seniors, we expected to win," said Senior Tiffany Kedziora.

Only winning a few games in the beginning of the season, the Pirates did not get the start they had hoped for. The girls had a hard time finding the right chemistry on the field.

"We had all the three aspects of the game [hitting, fielding, pitching] but they were not working together at the same time. We still had to get them all to work together to get better results," said Senior Heather Zurek.

In spite of the hole the team was in, the girls and Coach Govert kept believing that they would be able to come together in time for the very important games.

Even though the Pirates' Softball Team took some time to find out how to play together as a team, they faced less problems off the field.

"I love just being with the girls every day because we get along so well. We are like sisters," said Zurek.

Looking ahead for next year, the returning varsity players agreed that there is going to be a lot of changes on the team. By losing seven seniors, five of which were starters, the team will have to bring up players from the JV team.

Junior Amy Vargas said, "I have played with the group of seniors all my life. It's going to be tough without them, but we can still do it."

Following through with her pitch, Junior Amy Vargas focuses on throwing the perfect strike. In the beginning of the season, Vargas strained her tricep due to her pitching movement and was out for a couple of weeks. Teammate Senior Heather Zurek said that Vargas' arm continued to hurt throughout the entire season, causing a few setbacks.

After fielding the ball, Junior Jessica Falls throws the ball to first base to get the out. Falls said she has played softball since she was six years old. "I just love softball," Falls said. Decreasing errors and becoming a better fielder have been two improvements Falls said she has made this season.

In her ready position, Junior Tiffany Owen catches the ball at home plate. Owen said that next season only four varsity starters will return. "We'll do good, but we have to bring up a lot of people. We need to step up the aggressiveness," she said.

Making the transition from middle school to high school is a common thread among high school freshmen. Students who attend high school begin with the fear of being able to effectively open their lockers. Not making it to their classes on time and getting lost in the shuffle are fears that plague the freshmen as they enter high school.

The excitement of getting a driver's license and the opportunity to finally receive a varsity letter are the milestones which every sophomore hopes to reach. Junior year is surrounded with the excitement of finally becoming an upperclassman. Taking the SAT and attending prom are other firsts during junior year.

Finally, taking the senior picture and recording memories in the senior will is a highlight to end the high school career. The end is surrounded by college preparations and the excitement of graduation.

As the nominees for Junior homecoming queen are announced, Junior Blair Mitchell claps for her fellow classmates. Although this was Mitchell's second time being nominated, it was her first time winning. "I was so happy and honored," Mitchell said, "because there are so many girls in the Junior Class who can be chosen." Mitchell was shocked but happy she was chosen.

Working out during the fitness part of gym class, Freshman Danielle Bly said, "The hardest part is running. We run a lot." Bly is one of many students at Merrillville who take gym class throughout their high school careers. Although Bly said she expected high school to have more people, she said she was still pleased with the wide variety of classes offered to students.

Striking a pose at a basketball game, Freshman Jasmine Woods said she enjoys all of the attention she receives while she is performing. Woods said she did pretty well throughout the year. She said, "I just got back into it, the crowd helps me get it back."

Checking into the Homecoming Dance, Philip Nay and his date Brittany Mendoza prepare to have an enchanted evening. "I had a lot of fun at the dance, and then went broke when we went to eat at Bennigan's," said Nay.

Superheroes Wonder Woman and Storm please the crowd with waves and smiles on the freshman float. Hannelore Reynolds was not only Wonder Woman but also the vice president of the Freshman Class. Amanda Spodic double roles as Storm and the secretary of her class. The Freshman Class tried to incorporate the theme of the dance and the parade by having superheroes playing poker on their float. "It was a lot of fun coming together to build the float and play the games during Homecoming Week," Spodic said.

For sophomore Michael Ferguson, attending Merrillville High School is like following a family tradition. Not only his mother Pam Ferguson, graduate of '82, went to MHS, but also his aunt, uncle and even grandmother, who graduated all the way back in '55. "I think it is kind of cool, that it is like a family school," Michael said. Mother and son have shared their different experiences, but especially the differences that his mother told him, was what Michael remembered. "The high school was a lot smaller when she (Mrs. Ferguson) went here. Now she always gets lost," he said.

Most parents tell their children about high school before they start in order to prepare them. Sophomore Amanda Churilla was able to have a little more specific advice, because her father, Bob Churilla, went to Merrillville High School himself, graduating in '80. "My dad told me, that high school is not a big deal. It is just regular school and not that different from middle school," Amanda said. Unlike her father, Amanda was involved in an after-school-activity by playing soccer. "My dad told me, that I am more active than he," Amanda said. "He wasn't in any clubs or sports."

Exactly 38 years after his mother, Sophomore Kristifor Jankuloski will graduate from Merrillville High School in 2008. Based on four years of MHS experiences, Anica Jankuloski has shared lots of memories with her son. "It feels good to go to the same school as my mom, because when she takes me to high school events, she tells me about all the great things about high school that she remembers," Kristifor said. A lot has changed at MHS since Mrs. Jankuloski was a student, and when Kristifor some day has to send his children to high school, the same will probably have happened. Still he said he would like to see his children as future MHS students. "I know the school, and if they get in trouble, I can help them. I love the school, as I love my mother," he said.

Sophomore Amanda Velasquez, whose mother graduated in '87, shares most of her high school experiences with her mother. "Before I started high school, my mom told me to stay away from the economics teacher, because I guess she never really liked that teacher," Velasquez said. They talk about the teachers that they both know. "I really don't like the fact that my mom and I attended the same school because she knows everything about my school, and I would definitely not let my children go to the same high school that I attended."

Most parents do not hide the truth from their children. Sophomore Ryan Sobierajski, whose father graduated in 1977, said his father warned him about the school's size. "The only thing my father told me was that it's a big school, that it's going to take me a long time to know my way around," Sobierajski said. Sobierajski sometimes tells his father about some of his experiences in high school. "I really think it's pretty cool to attend the same school as my father, and I would like my children to attend the same school in the future," Sobierajski said.

For Sophomore Tiffany Holland, attending the same high school as her father is something she is proud of because he was on the football team. Holland's father graduated from Merrillville High School in 1987. "My father and I don't really talk about our experiences in high school, because I guess there's nothing to talk about."

What qualities do you look for in a friend?

"A sense of humor and fun to be around, someone who allows me to be myself when I'm with her. And also a person who is trustworthy."

— Emmalee Troupes

"Someone who is funny, that's the most important. Also honesty and loyalty."

— Patrick Nawracaj

"A good friend for me is someone who is funny and honest."

Offering his advice to the Senior Class, Senior Charles Cole speaks about the importance of being involved in the church. Cole said, "I wanted to be a part of such a rare occasion because we don't have enough opportunities to talk about God in school."

Speaking to his fellow classmates, Senior Daniel Nieman II urges them to turn to God for inspiration in life. During his speech, he said, "The Lord has inspired me to strive for the best and do the best I can." He said he hopes to become a minister and dedicate his life to God.

As he looks out into the audience, Senior James Rowe speaks about how his faith helped him succeed in school. Rowe was one of three student speakers at Baccalaureate.

As she speaks about life's priorities, Keynote Speaker Mrs. Nancy Draper performs a demonstration with Seniors Niki Kraska and Megan Lee. This demonstration involved coffee mugs and offered a message that one should always have time to enjoy a cup of coffee.

Keeping her message short and unusual, Mrs. Nancy Draper gives advice to the Senior Class through a speech and two demonstrations. Regarding Baccalaureate, Mrs. Draper said, "It's a great time for a reflection of things that are really important to you in life."

SENIORS rejoice

Words and music hung in the air and echoed through the halls of Our Lady of Consolation Church. Many seniors and their families were in attendance at this year's Baccalaureate, a non-denominational service that anyone can attend. Speakers at Baccalaureate were Seniors Daniel Nieman II, James Rowe, Charles Cole and Keynote Speaker Mrs. Nancy Draper.

"It was very touching and inspiring to speak at the Baccalaureate. I felt honored to be a part of it," said Mrs. Draper.

Providing the music for the ceremony were the high school orchestra and choir.

"I thought the service was awesome, and the music performances were incredible. The whole service was a good reflection of what graduation is all about," said Mrs. Draper.

"My favorite part of the service was getting up and singing with the choir for the last time," said Rowe.

For some, speaking to the audience was an ordeal in and of itself.

"It was nerve-racking when I started to speak, but I ended up getting into it, and I felt like I shared something with the Class of 2006," said Rowe.

Each person took his or her own unique approach in the themes of their speeches, likewise using different amounts of time preparing for the event. Mrs. Draper actually received the story she used in her speech in an e-mail from her daughter. The story was about filling a jar with various objects until the jar was finally full. Her speech sent a message about setting priorities and not forgetting the small things in life.

Senior Niki Kraska said, "I thought the service was very uplifting. All the speeches presented were very moving and meaningful."

In a tribute to their friends, Seniors Breana Hendrix, Kimberly Barnes, Sarita Hunter and Jermal Miller sing to the audience. Their song stressed the importance of friendship in life.

Dressed in her graduation gown, Senior Jessica Parker plays the cello. Members of the orchestra performed throughout Baccalaureate.

Singing Josh Groban's and Charlotte Church's rendition of "The Prayer," Seniors Donald Toth and Courtney Miller perform at Our Lady of Consolation Church. Their duet preceded the choir's performance that day.

END

Beginning to embark upon the "real world," the graduates celebrate with the balloon drop, signifying the end of Commencement.

"Life is like a box of... crayons." This concept, explained in Salutatorian Callie Lucas's graduation speech, was a continuous theme throughout Commencement, held at the Radisson Star Plaza Theatre June 7, 2006. The Class of 2006 had ten valedictorians and one salutatorian. Each valedictorian spoke about the different stages of life that graduates have gone through and compared these stages to a box of crayons.

In her speech about friendship, Valedictorian Niki Kraska said, "But don't think of it as goodbye. Instead think of it as 'see ya later,' knowing that our friends will always be there, leaving a color on your picture, leaving a handprint on your heart."

The night ended with the graduates walking across the stage to receive their diplomas, followed by the symbolic gesture of the turning of the tassels. At the end of Commencement, many graduates celebrated their accomplishments, cried about leaving and looked on to the future with excitement.

Valedictorian Stephanie Pavlish said, "Still remember to look on toward the future because this isn't the end. This isn't the even the beginning of the end, but yet perhaps the end of the beginning."

Graduating Seniors Gilberto Fuentes, Alyse Fultz and Tamara Gaddy cheer on their fellow graduates and prepare to turn their tassels to show the completion of high school.

Cruising through the line, Seniors Tara Schreiber and Morgan Gill ride in the back of a convertible. The Senior Drive-Around was a display of cars and even motorcycles with the Senior Class singing and dancing along to their radios.

Year after year, the Senior Class anticipates graduation, summer vacation and starting college, but before the school year wraps up, the students are able to gather for one of their last times together at the Senior Breakfast and Drive-Around. The Class of '06 pulled out their best ensembles and drove in their best rides to make this MHS tradition a memorable one.

One of the main speakers during the breakfast, Senior Melody Gomez, thought that the experience was enjoyable as a whole. Gomez thought the best part of the morning was the announcement of the winners for the Senior Choice Awards.

"It was really cool to see who won what," said Gomez.

Senior Raymond Duttweiler, however, thought the best part of the experience was being able to leave school.

"A lot of gas was wasted. The school owes Justin Floyd two dollars for gas money," said Duttweiler.

Whether they enjoyed leaving school early or being able to spend time with their friends, students from the Senior Class of 2006 seemed to agree that the Senior Breakfast and Drive-Around was an event that they will never forget.

Showing off their Mustang GT, Seniors Rafael Gerodimos, George Sanchez, Mario Montemayor and Adrian Sanchez cruise through the Senior Drive-Around.

Let the SENIORS shine

Snapping pictures and coasting down the line, this group of senior girls enjoys the Drive-Around as one last chance to see the Senior Class all together.

Grabbing a bite to eat, Senior Tara Florida scopes out the menu for the Senior Breakfast. Students were welcomed to enjoy an array of breakfast foods from the cafeteria one last time before graduating.

As the Senior Class gathers around the television, the senior video plays on the screen. The video displayed a collection of moments to remember from freshman to senior year. The seniors laughed and cried together reliving every moment.

While accepting her award for Most Spirited, Senior Renee Schmellmeyer gives Senior Melody Gomez a smile. The seniors voted on different categories for the Senior Choice Awards toward the end of the year. The categories ranged from Best Eyes to Most Likely to Live the OC Life.

Flipping through the Senior Magazine, Senior Tabatha Wood reads through the memories remembered and left behind but never forgotten. The Senior Magazine displayed the Senior Choice Awards, letters from teachers and senior wills.

Taking it all in, Seniors Dejan Kitevski and Edwin Moreno talk amongst themselves about the Senior Magazine. The Senior Magazine allowed a chance for the students to reminisce on the "good times."

Jumping for the rebound, Senior Rayshon Richardson, faculty team member Mr. Michael Megyesi and Senior Bryan Ruder all reach for the ball. The seniors and faculty were neck and neck throughout the entire game, but in the end, the seniors took it all.

After winning the Senior/Faculty Basketball Game, Senior Chad Dawson hugs his friend, Senior Deji Macarthy. "The game was fun. It was a lot of competition, and the teachers did a good job with defense and scoring points. That's why the entire game was neck-and-neck," said Dawson.

As she yells at the top of her lungs, Senior Porsche Bradley cheers on her senior classmates playing in the game. "The game was so much fun. It was fun as an underclassman watching, but being a senior and watching it was so much more fun because I'm a senior finally," said Bradley.

Falling to the floor, Senior Justin Burke tries to catch the ball before faculty team member Mr. Jared Pierson. "There was competition the whole game. Everyone was on the ball and the score was close the whole game. It was cool," said Burke.

As he plays defense, Senior Lewis Miller watches carefully as faculty team member Mr. Anthony Hofer brings in the ball. "The game was great, and the seniors really put in some stiff competition," said Mr. Hofer.

Before the game, Senior Brittany Jones holds a sign she made for her best friend, Senior Donald Toth. Toth played in the game against the faculty, and Jones supported him all the way. "Donnie is such a good friend, and he has high school spirit. It's fun watching him play," said Jones.

After Senior Paige Patterson is announced as "Merrillville Idol," she sings to the entire crowd of faculty and students during halftime of the Senior/Faculty Basketball Game. "I was surprised I won," said Patterson. "I was nervous in the beginning, but after singing the National Anthem, I was not nervous anymore."

Faculty VS. SENIORS

"Seniors rule!" seemed to be the resounding chant after the seniors' victory in the school's annual Senior/Faculty Basketball Game. After the buzzer rang following a one-minute overtime, the seniors were on top with a score of 24-22. This was the seniors' second win in a row, and this year's game proved to be physical with both teams recording the most fouls ever in the game's history.

"The game was very physical. There were fouls and hacking going on every-where on the court," said Senior Colin McDonald, a participant in the game.

Another participant, Senior Roger Pesnaux, said, "It was like a boxing match on the court."

"I was more tired than I would have liked to be, and I was upset because I missed a few lay-ups that I should have made even though I was being fouled," said Mr. Jared Pierson, a player for the faculty team.

The game may have been physical, but nothing stopped the athletes and fans from having a good time.

"I always like the intensity the kids in the crowd bring to the game. I love high energy games," said Mr. Pierson.

With both teams battling back and forth, the game ended in a tie and had to move to overtime. After overtime, the seniors pulled off the win.

"The game had a lot of ups and downs, but I was always confident that the seniors would pull it off," said Senior Michael Padgett.

Pesnaux said, "My favorite part was the end when everyone ran out onto the court."

Although many athletes played during most of the game, some only received minimum playing time.

"I dribbled for three steps, and I had a good pass," said Senior Brian Reese, who played for less than a minute of the game.

The coaches for the seniors were Brittney Moore and Darryl Evans, and the coach for the faculty team was Mr. Dave DeMuth.

Senior Justin Floyd, a fan, said with a laugh, "The only thing that could make the game better would be me coaching because I am the second coming of Bobby Knight."

If you can imagine it,
you can achieve it.
If you can dream it,
you can become it.

We are so proud of you, Erica.

Love,
Mom & Dad

Zack Sperling

Congratulations on your high school graduation, Zack.
May all your dreams
come true.
Love,
Mom & Dad

Christina

Colophon

Merrillville High School, a member of Quill & Scroll and the Indiana High School Press Association, produces Volume 81 of the Merrillvue. Guided by Mrs. Teresa Procter and led by Editor Morgan Zellers, the fourth-hour yearbook class developed this book with the theme of "Purple Reign."

Through March 30, the yearbook was only available for purchase via Internet or phone. From April 1 to 15, the students could purchase the book at school. The cost of the book was set at $45.

Mrs. Valerie T. Tanke is the sales representative for Walsworth Publishing Company.

To create the book, the staff used Adobe Pagemaker, Microsoft Word and Adobe Photoshop. The fonts in this book include Jasper and Abyss on the cover and the title page; Dean for the body text, captions and folios; several different fonts in Lifestyles; BigFiction in Academics; JamesBold in Organizations and Events; OneChild in Performing Arts; ImportBold and Helvetica in Sports and Braddon in Seniors.

While underclassmen and faculty portraits were taken by Lifetouch Prestige Portraits, Mr. John Bir from John Giolas Photographers and his staff took senior portraits along with pictures for sections including Clubs and Activities, Sports and Performing Arts.

The 2006 yearbook staff would like to thank, above all, Mrs. Procter for her help, guidance and patience. The staff would also like to thank Mrs. Tanke for her help throughout the process. The staff also appreciates the assistance and contributions from the Athletic Department, the secretaries of the Main Office and the Guidance Department. Appreciation is also due to Mr. Mark Ciesielski and the PNN staff for their help in advertising this year's book. The staff thanks any other person or group that has helped in the development of this book.

Closing

First and foremost, I would like to thank Mrs. Procter for everything she has done for this book and for the staff. Her patience and knowledge have been key in producing this book. I speak for the staff and myself as I thank her for her endless efforts on a daily basis to keep us on task and help us in creating this original yearbook.

I would also like to thank the entire staff. This book was not just a creation of a few people, but instead a combination of the thoughts and ideas of the entire staff. We had our rough days as well as our easy ones. We pushed through tough deadlines, computer crashes and so many other obstacles. After setting foot through the doors of M108, we realized that this yearbook would be harder to produce than we thought. However, no matter what the circumstances, we pulled through as a team. We worked together to help one another to create this book that I could not be any more proud of.

I also appreciate the work done by Senior Katherine Kaplar. As a teacher's aide, she came in and completed the book's entire index, a job that would not exactly be called "fun." Although she was not even in the fourth-hour class, I consider her a member of the staff. I would like to acknowledge a foreign exchange student, Senior Trine Eskesen, for all that she has done for this book. She came to this country just before the school year started and instantly picked up on writing stories and designing pages. She caught on quickly and became a crucial member of the staff.

I would also like to thank the teachers, students and coaches that allowed us to interrupt class after class and practice after practice for interviews and pictures. I would like to thank all of the individuals and businesses that supported our book along the way. Thanks are also due to Mrs. Tanke, who has been there for our mishaps and helped us to fix them. Lastly, I want to thank anyone else who has in some way or another contributed or supported us in developing the book that the staff has worked so hard to create.

With much appreciation,
Morgan Zellers
